Neighborhood Groups Have Action, Concern

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of nine articles on Lincoln's neighborhood organizations.)

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Community organizations? What community organizations? Quietly enough, neighborhood groups in Lincoln boast accomplishments ranging from area clean-ups to political involvement to getting a school built to devising long-range plans for redesigning and revitalizing an area.

The groups' goals are as varied as their members, but they all have in common action and concern.

"Up until three years ago, the only organizations (in Lincoln) that you had were businessmen's," said City Housing Administrator Carl A. Kopines.

"Our experience showed us that to have a stable and viable program, we had to have the participation of the residents" as well as businessmen, Kopines said.

Mayor, Ekvall

Now, he said, thanks to the urging of Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf and the hard work of Thomas A. Ekvall, CHA housing research development programmer, eight Lincoln neighborhood organizations have entered the 1973 Nebraska Community Improvement Program.

Last September, Mayor Schwartzkopf authorized CHA to assign to the neighborhood groups.

"At the same time," Kopines said, "the State Office of Economic Development (OED) contacted the mayor and discussed with him inclusion of neighborhood awards" in what used to be competition only among communities.

The mayor decided OED's neighborhood concept was a good one, Kopines said, and designated CHA the liaison between OED and the city.

'Best Route'

"Mostly we tried to sound out leadership in the areas" at first, Ekvall said. "In meeting with several residents, we decided maybe a neighborhood organization would be the best route to go."

CHA advised when an organization could best serve the things that a neighborhood wanted, he said. And CHA showed how to set up the machinery to deal with a neighborhood's problems or needs.

Rather than individuals making complaints singly to city offices, CHA pointed out how a neighborhood group asking for the same things could wield more clout, such as on zoning issues.

"Some groups stick to single issues," Ekvall said, such as zoning or developing parks. But he said "most of our effort has been with the multi-purpose group," working for the total needs of a neighborhood.

Kopines said the mayor's "emphasis on the total neighborhood concept" is intended mainly "to prevent the deterioration of the older residential neighborhoods."

He said, "The only way we felt to do this was through the neighborhood organization."

Unity, Identity

Group action gets residents away from neighbor-versus-neighbor conflicts and "promotes neighborhood identity and unity," Ekvall contended. "They work as a team to look at their own problems and solve them."

He said a neighborhood group allows channeling of dissent "toward a more constructive relationship with city hall" and allows "the true element of citizen participation."

Because some neighborhood groups don't have expertise in working with city officials, Ekvall said CHA helps "establish better communications with city government" and also advises residents what limitations the city has in getting things done.

Neighborhood evaluations also allow CHA to get an idea of the priorities a neighborhood establishes. Then CHA can provide follow-up assistance or prompt technical assistance from the city.

Catalyst

"Most of it is what they identify as what they want to accomplish within the neighborhood contest," Ekvall said. "We help them to crystallize their ideas."

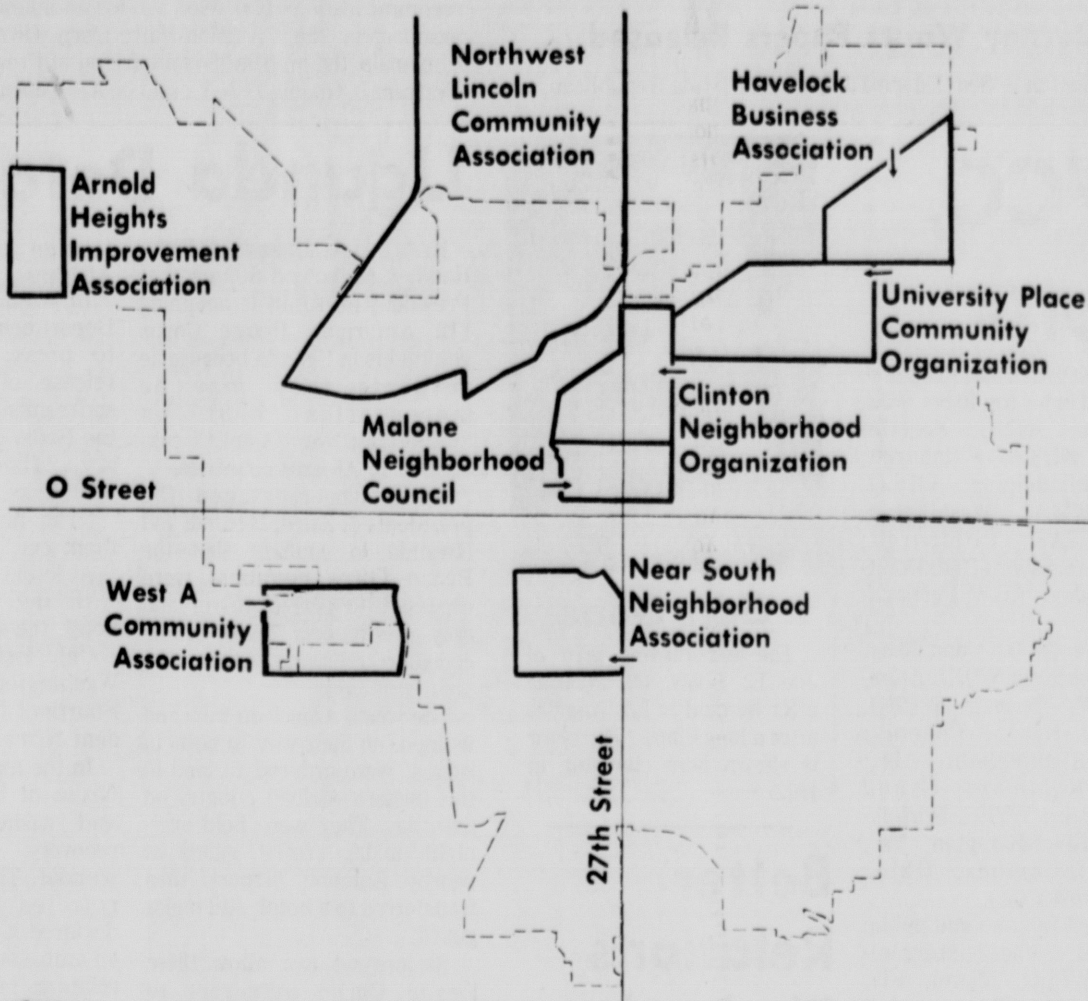

"Our whole philosophy," he explained, "is that unless you involve the people from the beginning, you're not going to get the kind of improvement" they want. Nor will enthusiasm die out, he added.

When considering what a neighborhood needs, Ekvall and Kopines said part of the total plan will take into consideration the Goals and Policies Report.

"But when we meet with a neighborhood group, our main job is to give them support and interest in the organization," Kopines said.

"So that the neighborhood process stays continuous," Ekvall added.

Lincoln Groups In CIP Award Contest

The Neighborhood Awards Competition of the Nebraska Community Improvement Program (CIP) recognizes neighborhood improvement efforts in cities of 50,000 or more.

Eight Lincoln organizations have entered CIP, designed to stimulate greater interest, concern and action by the groups in improving the economic, social, physical and cultural components of their neighborhoods.

The program is co-administered by the State Economic Development Department's community affairs division and the University of Nebraska Extension Division's community development department.

The natural gas companies serving Nebraska are sponsoring awards and cash prizes of $300, $200 and $100 for the first, second- and third-place winners.

The CIP year began last Oct. 2 and closes on Sept. 15, 1973. The judges will consider the neighborhoods' various civic, religious, business, youth, fraternal and educational organizations.

CIP Awards Day will be Nov. 2.

Berliners Rip Hole In Barrier

BERLIN (AP) — Several hundred West Berliners ripped a two-yard hole in the Communist wall surrounding their city early Sunday morning. It was one of the most serious explosions of public fury in recent times against the Berlin Wall.

West Berlin police arrived in strength to force the crowd back. They gave this account:

The incident began as East German border guards apparently foiled an escape over the wall into West Berlin by three East Germans.

Guards on the East German side opened fire with automatic weapons, letting loose three or four sustained bursts. They turned out tower searchlights to prevent further observations from the Western side.

A crowd of about 300 residents from a nearby West Berlin apartment area assembled at the spot and yelled "murderers" and "criminals" at the Eastern guards. The crowd then tore a wire fence out of the wall and created the two-yard hole.

An East German border guard was posted at the hole and cocked his sub-machinegun into firing position, calming the crowd.

By daylight Sunday, the guard had been replaced by motorized patrols on the Eastern side and the hole had been wired shut.

The apartment development has been plagued with incidents of Eastern gunfire at refugees seeking to use the cover of adjacent East German fields to reach the West. Anger has grown because of past instances where Communist bullets slammed into apartments, smashing windows and doing other damage. No one has been hurt.

The district, with large numbers of young people, also is the one place along the 100-mile wall circumference where holes are regularly smashed into the wall. The barrier is now made of prefabricated sections that can be broken out with relative ease.

Two Investigators Say It Would Help

. . . Mitchell To Testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic member of the Senate Watergate committee Sunday urged President Nixon to reconsider his decision not to appear before the panel, saying the President's testimony could restore the public's confidence in the White House.

"I would think with the cloud of uncertainty hanging over the President it might be best if he requested to appear," Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., said on the ABC-TV program "Issue and Answers."

The committee, preparing to hear from former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell Tuesday, has not formally requested the President to appear, but most of the committee members said he should testify and make his papers available to clear his record.

"He either ought to request to come before our committee or some other forum where he can be examined and restore the public's confidence," Talmadge said.

The President said Saturday in a letter to committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C. that he would not testify before the committee "under any circumstances" or permit access to his papers.

"I have concluded that if I were to testify before the committee irreparable damage would be done to the constitutional principle of separation of powers," Nixon said.

He said he would withhold the documents to preserve "the indispensable principle of confidentiality of presidential papers."

But Talmadge said Sunday, "I've always thought that public records belong to the American public and a committee of the U.S. Senate would have the right to see those records and subpoena them if necessary. I have serious doubts the President of the United States can withhold those documents from the committee."

Ervin said, "If a President wants to withhold information from the committee and the American people, I would just let him take the consequences of that."

Among the Republican members of the committee, Sens. Howard H. Baker, Jr., of Tennessee and Edward J. Gurney of Florida indicated they thought the President had made the proper choice about not testifying at the present but they hoped he would be open to questioning in the future.

In other Watergate developments,

Talmadge said the committee did not know what Mitchell, a former Nixon campaign manager, would say in his testimony. Mitchell has been implicated in testimony before the committee of having been involved in the planning of the break-in at the Democratic headquarters in the Watergate complex last year.

A Gallup Poll released Sunday reported that 71 per cent of those questioned believe the President had some involvement in the bugging or cover-up. The survey also said 18 per cent feel he should be removed from office.

Historian James MacGregor Burns said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" that the President was "absolutely within his constitutional rights" to refuse to appear before the committee or make his papers available. Burns said an impeachment proceeding would be a "perfectly good constitutional process to explain his case."

Baker, the ranking minority member on the committee, said he agreed that the separation of powers would make it impossible for the committee to call the President to testify.

Baker said he hoped "some other means can be worked out" to get the President's version.

"We need to get his point of view on these conversations—those John Dean has related, he said."

Dean, the fired White House counsel, has been the chief witness before the committee, whose testimony has implicated the President in the cover-up.

Gurney said that while the committee "should get any documents that have a direct bearing on the Watergate affair . . . you don't want the presidential papers totally open to scrutiny on everything."

He said he didn't see any need for the President to appear before the committee at the present but urged Nixon to open himself to questioning, either by the committee or the news media, in the future, after more witnesses have been heard.

"It would be most inappropriate (for the President) at this time to come before the committee," Gurney said, on "Issues and Answers" with Talmadge. "At the appropriate time, when we've heard most of the witnesses, the President ought to make some sort of statement. He should go before the American people and subject himself to some sort of questioning."

"If the President submits himself to a free-swinging press conference we can get the answers out," he said. "This is what I would hope he would do."

"As far as I'm concerned the President is innocent until I've seen some hard evidence that he is guilty and I haven't seen one shred of evidence that he is guilty yet."

Senate Majority Whip Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Nixon's decision not to release the papers detracted from the President's credibility and built up that of Dean.

"The only thing he can do now is . . . stop isolating himself from the public," Byrd said on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation." "I don't think the issuance of press releases or a televised appearance will convince the people . . ."

'74 Solons To Taste First Fruits Of MIS

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska plans to show the 1974 Legislature next spring the fruits of NU's first year's work on a management information system (MIS).

"We hope by March or April we will be able to show the Legislature reports based on 1973 fall semester data," said NU's recently appointed MIS director.

"We want to go as fast as the state puts money into it," explained James Maynard in an interview. "We're going to do $40,000 worth this year."

Maynard, an assistant vice president for administration, was named by the Board of Regents to direct NU's first step in the MIS direction.

That maiden step will be financed with $40,000 specified for that purpose in the budget recommendations made by Gov. J. James Exon and eventually adopted by the 1973 Legislature.

Nothing New

In the MIS concept, which is attracting increasing attention in universities across the land, there is nothing new, Maynard noted.

"It involves trying to analyze the in-residence teaching program with respect to the cost and productivity of people at the course level."

Maynard said the same sort of information can be gleaned from university statistics without a management information system.

But a system approach to it, he added means that the information will be available on a continuing basis, rather than at a point in time when an extra effort is made to collect the data sought.

Explaining MIS in terms borrowed from the computer industry, Maynard said it holds the promise of supplying more information to decision-makers about "outputs" — the products of the educational enterprise.

The sort of information that colleges and universities have been used to stressing in the past has been of the "input" kind — how much money goes to each department, for example.

Outputs Emphasized

But with the new emphasis on outputs, an emphasis which has gained greater recognition as once spiraling higher education budgets have been reduced to ones with much smaller increases, the focus has been on what is produced for the money spent.

Thus greater attention has gone to the dollars it takes to produce one credit hour of teaching in a particular department and at a particular level, such as undergraduate, or to the number of student credit hours produced by each fulltime faculty member.

"Perhaps at some point in time," said Maynard, "the quality per unit" will be plugged into MIS systems. But he noted that would take far more sophistication than is available at the moment.

To avoid covering the same groundwork that other institutions have been over, NU will adopt for its purposes in this fiscal year an MIS format developed at the University of Colorado by the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems.

Using an NCHEMS system known as RRRPM 1.6 (for resource requirements prediction model 1.6), NU will begin to plug its own data into a computer program which will spew out information on student credit hour production and cost per credit hour.

Biggest Problem

The biggest problem and the effort which will take the most time, said Maynard, will be development of an efficient system for collecting the raw data on student enrollments, faculty and finances and transmitting it in understandable terms to the computer center.

During the first year, the efforts to develop such a network will be limited to the teaching programs on the UN-Lincoln and UN at Omaha campuses.

Eventually, said Maynard, he hopes the system will become efficient enough, with the right kind of data, to help administrators make more knowledgeable decisions about the status of current programs and the future of current efforts or new ones.

But he cautioned that it'll be some time before the university learns a great deal more about itself through MIS.

" . . . we want to impress on people the shortcomings of this model," he said of the NCHEMS format. But he added that once the model is working, it will be possible to "begin doing something conceptually to make the model a little more relevant."

News Summary

Nairobi, Kenya — A group of 112 U.S. Peace Corps volunteers who had been on their way to Zaire in Central Africa, were held prisoner for the second night by Gen. Idi Amin, the president of Uganda, who suspected the volunteers might be "mercenaries." The volunteers' chartered airplane was detained just before noon Saturday when it stopped at the international airport at Entebbe, Uganda, to refuel. American diplomatic protests have been ineffective. (More on Page 2.)

Rev. Kung 'Not Against Pope Paul'

Tuebingen, West Germany — The Rev. Hans Kung, a Roman Catholic theologian who questions papal infallibility, said he was not against Pope Paul VI. "I am only against an absolute, totalitarian, authoritarian papacy," Kung, a 45-year-old Swiss, who is pastor of a church in Tuebingen, West Germany, said he would disregard an order from the Vatican to accept its infallibility doctrine, as redefined in a declaration last Thursday, or go to Rome to justify himself. Kung said that "it's improbable that I will be excommunicated."

Secret Gifts Financed GOP Sabotage

New York — The Republican Party's effort to sabotage Democratic presidential candidates in 1972 was a two-pronged operation approved by some of President Nixon's most influential aides, directed in part by White House officials, and financed with more than $100,000 in unreported contributions to the Nixon campaign. That was among the information given by informed sources to the New York Times.

Sen. Gurney Wants Papers Released

Washington — Sen. Edward J. Gurney, Florida Republican, who has been President Nixon's staunchest defender on the Senate Watergate Committee, said he believed that presidential papers bearing on the Watergate investigation should be made available to the committee. He was interviewed on the television program "Issues and Answers." Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, Georgia Democrat, who was on the same program, agreed. President Nixon said Saturday he would not appear before the committee in any circumstance, and would not permit to inspect his files. (More on Page 1.)

Birth, Death Told of Antitrust Suit

New York — Justice Department officials overruled staff recommendations two years ago for an investigation by pricing practices on the Precision Valve Corp. Owned by Robert H. Abplanalp, the multimillionaire friend of President Nixon. Rep. Bertram L. Godell, D-N.Y., said he had "documents and memos which demonstrate the birth and death of an antitrust action" against Precision Valve, and said he would give the documents to Archibald Cox, the special Watergate prosecutor.

NAACP To Expel Atlanta Branch

Atlanta — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has decided to expel its Atlanta Branch in a dispute over an integration plan for the city's schools. The decision was made last week at the association's annual convention in Indianapolis, according to members of its national board of directors. The Atlanta branch and NAACP's national office in New York have been arguing over the plan since last February. The plan would accept a minimum of school integration in return for top administrative positions in the Atlanta school system for blacks.

Commissioner Hits FCC, Rates U.S. TV Stations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commissioner Nicholas Johnson fired a farewell blast Sunday at what he called the Federal Communication Commission's refusal to set minimum TV license-renewal performance standards. He laid down his own proposed standards and rated the nation's big city television stations from best to worst.

"The major hope is simply that the mere publishing of this data will, standing alone, provide re-enforcement for the better stations and an incentive to improvement by the worst," Johnson said in an introduction to a 264-page study.

Johnson's listing referred only to television stations. He rated network-affiliated stations in the nation's top 50 markets, which he said theoretically consist of 150 stations, but his rating was of 144 in most categories and 147 in others because of the information available.

Each station was rated separately in various categories such as news and public affairs, local programming, the least commercial advertising concentration and the most use of funds for programming. Discrimination in employment is handled separately.

Lumping all the programming categories, Johnson pointed to KPIX in San Francisco as the best network affiliate and WCCB in Charlotte, N.C., as the worst. Johnson's seven-year term on the commission expired July 1. During that time, he became known as the most frequent dissenter and critic of broadcasting on the commission. He told a newsman he will remain in office until a successor is confirmed, if that happens within a couple of weeks.

He said he has not yet decided about his future or whether he will stay in broadcasting. Johnson's study, titled "Broadcasting in America," follows his book, "How to Talk Back to Your Television Set." But the new study is an official dissent to what he called the automatic renewal of licenses of broadcast stations in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Broadcast licenses within each state expire simultaneously and Johnson has dissented to each bimonthly renewal over the course of his seven years. He has largely objected to what he calls the commission majority's refusal to set down minimum levels of performance in the area of programming and employment.

Johnson was aided in the study by his staff, a group of Georgetown University law students in a seminar he was teaching. FCC employees outside his office and guests appearing before his seminar.

The ratings were arrived at from information supplied by the broadcasters themselves to the FCC, Johnson said, and there was no monitoring of stations or examination of TV Guide or local newspaper listings.

Once again criticizing the FCC as being too subservient to industry pressure, Johnson said: "The revelations surrounding Watergate have only dramatized what many concerned citizens and public interest lawyers have known for a long time: we cannot rely on government to solve our problems."

He said the commission makes "no inquiry whatsoever into a licensee's news, public affairs and other non-sports, nonentertainment programming, no matter how badly a station had performed."

Another shortcoming, he said, is that there is no inquiry into when during the broadcast day news, public affairs and other programming are being aired. Nor is the time of the day and length of public service announcements and the source shown in reports the commission requires, Johnson said.

He said the commission has done nothing about over-commercialization "because its knee-jerk response tends to be to protect the industry's profits rather than the public interest."

Johnson said the FCC goal of making television focus on local programming has been "largely a failure" because his analysis shows the average station did little more than 13 hours of local programming a week.

In Johnson's over-all best programming criteria for TV stations, KPIX in San Francisco is f-flowed in his top 10 by: WJZ, Baltimore; KING, Seattle-Tacoma; KDKA, Pittsburgh; KYW, Philadelphia; WPLG, Miami; WMAL, Washington, D.C.; WTAE, Pittsburgh; WFMY, Greensboro-High Point-Winston Salem; KGW, Portland, Ore.

Johnson rates the worst 10 as: WCCB, Charlotte; WQXI, Atlanta; KBTU, Denver; WHBQ, Memphis; KOOL, Phoenix; WBMG, Birmingham, Ala.; WKZO, Kalamazoo-Grand Rapids, Mich.; WVEC, Norfolk-Newport News-Hampton, Va.; WTVN, Columbus, Ohio; KMBC, Kansas City.

Rated best in news and public affairs and "other" programming is WPLG, Miami, Fla. WDHO, Toledo, Ohio, is rated worst.

The station rated as having the least commercial advertising concentration is KPIX, San Francisco. WDAF, Kansas City, is rated as having the most.

WLWT in Cincinnati is rated No. 1 in local programming and WWSY, Syracuse, N.Y., is placed last.

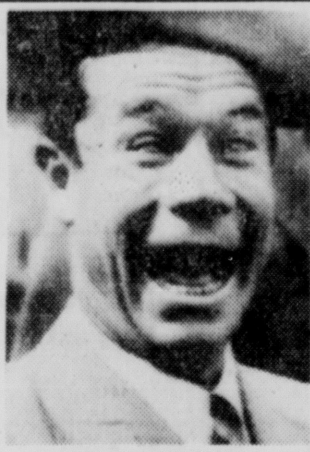

The station that rated best in percentage of revenues used for program expenses was WABC, New York City, and WBRC, Birmingham, was last.

WKY at Oklahoma City was found to have given the most public service announcements, and WHNB at Hartford-New Haven, Conn., the least.

WTEV, Providence, R.I. was rated as having the best record of minority employment, and WKZO, Kalamazoo-Grand Rapids, Mich., the worst.

KABC at Los Angeles was rated as the best in high pay to minority employees, and WKZO, Kalamazoo-Grand Rapids, Mich., the lowest.

Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. was rated as having the best record among owners of multiple stations. Its stations in the over-all programming ratings were 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th and 31st. Johnson said the corporate owner with the worst over-all record was the Taft stations, rated 49th, 120th, 123rd, 134th and 136th.

Better Relations Pledged

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers came to Czechoslovakia on Sunday pledging to improve U.S. relations with the Communist country.

In less than 24 hours, Rogers said, he hopes to make important headway in talks with Czechoslovak leaders toward cultural exchanges, reuniting of divided families and compensation for U.S. property nationalized during World War II.

He will also sign a new consular convention that could give U.S. diplomats better access to Americans who get into scrapes here. It is likely to be followed by a new U.S. consular office in Bratislava, the Slovak capital.

Rogers is the first U.S. secretary of state to visit Czechoslovakia since the Communist government took over following World War II. He is stopping off in Prague on the way home to Washington from the European Security Conference in Helsinki, Finland.

Foreign Minister Bohuslav Chnoupek, a 47-year-old former journalist who seems devoted to broadening his country's relations with the West, was at Ruzyně Airport to greet Rogers. An American flag rippled in the breeze under steel-gray skies.

Uganda Detains Peace Corps Members

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Radio Uganda said Sunday that President Idi Amin is detaining 112 American Peace Corps volunteers in Uganda because he suspects they may be mercenaries bent on "imperialist" or "Zionist" subversion in African countries.

Amin has messaged the presidents of Zaire, Burundi and Rwanda to confirm that the Peace Corps members were expected to arrive there, and only after he gets replies will he consider releasing them, the broadcast said.

The young American men and women, on their way to posts in Africa, were ordered to land in this eastern African country on Saturday. They were held overnight under armed guard at nearby Entebbe Airport, then transferred to a hotel, still under guard.

"Before we can allow these Peace Corps members to proceed," Amin said, "I would like to receive confirmation from President Mobutu of Zaire and President Michel Micombero of Burundi whether their countries expected them."

Amin said he acted because the arrival of the American volunteers was "similar to the situation" in the Congo civil war more than a decade ago in which foreign mercenaries fought Africans.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department said it is continuing to press Uganda for quick release of the volunteers. A spokesman had no comment on the Radio Uganda report but did say "They are peace corps volunteers."

"The important thing is to get them out," he said.

At least one embassy officer is with the volunteers at their hotel, the spokesman said.

Only last week, Amin upset Washington with an unusual Fourth of July message to President Nixon.

In the message, Amin accused Nixon of murder in Cambodia and wished him a "speedy recovery" from the Watergate scandal. The State Department rejected the message and declared it would refuse to send an ambassador to Uganda unless relations improve.

The previous U.S. ambassador, Thomas Melag, was recalled last year and U.S. aid and Peace Corps programs in Uganda are being cut off following Amin's abrupt expulsion of about 40,000 Asians in his campaign to Africanize the economy.

The chartered East African Airways jetliner carrying the U.S. Peace Corpsmen from London to Zaire, the former Congo, left behind its young American passengers and flew to Nairobi, Kenya, with its British and American crew.

In Nairobi, Alan di Piero, the plane's American first officer, said, "The kids were just great — they sang all night — 'God Bless America,' folk songs. You couldn't break their spirit."

A U.S. diplomat who spent the night at the airport with the detained volunteers said, "Mostly they worried about whether their parents were worrying about them; they didn't worry about themselves."

Final destination of the U.S. Peace Corps flight was Bukavu, near the headwaters of the Congo River in the highlands of eastern Zaire.

The chartered VC10 jet refueled Saturday and took off for Bujumbura, in Burundi, its next scheduled stop. But the Ugandan air force then ordered the plane back to Entebbe airport, near Lake Victoria and 21 miles from Kampala, the capital of Uganda.

Reliable sources said the plane's British captain, Gordon W. Mitchell, turned the VC-10 back to Entebbe on instructions from the airport control tower. The radio message said the plane would be intercepted by Ugandan air force MIG fighters and forced back if it did not return voluntarily.

The sources said the jetliner was nearly out of Ugandan airspace when the message was received, but it turned back partly because "you can't outrun a MIG" and partly because of the possibility of developments in Burundi.

Immediate speculation aboard the plane — which later proved groundless — was that disorders in Burundi had closed the Bujumbura airport.

The plane and its luggage were searched but officials reportedly found nothing objectionable.

The Americans were kept at the airport. Guarded by troops for more than 24 hours, they slept on airport benches. They had left the United States Thursday and had been traveling ever since.

The Home for the Friendless, located at 11th & South Streets, was one of Nebraska's first institutions for orphaned and destitute children.

Lincolinites were concerned about the care of the less fortunate. This civic concern was creating a better environment for the people of Lincoln.

In 1901, Roper & Sons Mortuary, too, was establishing a tradition of thoughtful care and service to the community. Today, this community support and service are Roper & Sons' trademark.

For '76 Election: Kennedy Leading Agnew, Connally

By LOUIS HARRIS

In an early test for the 1976 election which was conducted among those who voted last fall, Sen. Edward Kennedy runs ahead of Vice President Agnew by a 50-42% margin, but former Treasury Secretary John Connally as the GOP nominee runs a much closer 49-45% behind the Massachusetts senator.

These results would indicate that Agnew would face an uphill battle in 1976 if he were the Republican nominee and Kennedy were named by the Democrats. By dint of his relatively strong showing, it appears that Connally has not suffered materially by his recent move to change his party affiliation from Democratic to Republican, just as the Watergate revelations were breaking.

A key difference in the Agnew and Connally showings against Kennedy can be found in the South. The Vice President wins in the South by a relatively narrow 49-43% margin. But Connally opens up a much larger 53-41% edge over Kennedy below the Mason-Dixon line.

The survey was conducted in mid-June among 1,509 households. They were asked: "Suppose for President in 1976 it were between Vice President Spiro Agnew for the Republicans and Sen. Edward Kennedy for the Democrats. If you had to choose right now, whom would you vote for?"

AGNEW VS. KENNEDY IN '76
Agnew	42
Kennedy	50
Not sure	8

Striking in this outcome is the fact that Kennedy has not increased the lead he held on the eve of the 1972 election, despite the Watergate scandals which have broken since then.

The fact that Kennedy has not widened his lead with the Watergate affair dominating the news can be read in two possible ways. On the surface, it could be taken to mean that Agnew has not suffered appreciably from the fallout of Watergate.

But it is entirely possible that quite a different phenomenon is at work, centering on Sen. Kennedy. It is entirely possible that Watergate is not helping Kennedy's chances, because many voters are reminded of the moral implications of the Chapquid incident back in 1969.

The cross section was also asked: "Suppose for President in 1976, it were between former Governor John Connally of Texas for the Republicans and Sen. Edward Kennedy for the Democrats. If you had to choose right now, whom would you vote for?"

CONNALLY VS. KENNEDY IN '76
Connally	45
Kennedy	49
Not sure	6

The former Texas Governor's strength shows not only among Southern voters, but also among professional and executive people, a growing part of the electorate. Connally wins this vote by 55-42%, while Agnew does no better than 50-43%. Agnew does slightly better among Republicans (81-15%) than Connally, who wins the votes of his new party members, 79-17%.

But Connally does better than Agnew among Democrats and independents. Another key area of difference is the Midwest, where Connally finished in a dead heat with Kennedy 48-48%, while Agnew trails Kennedy, 45-51%.

The mark of Kennedy's strength is that he is still capable of reviving the old coalition on which his brother won in 1960, and which stems back to the old New Deal days. Kennedy is strongest among union members, blacks, low income people, and those with the least education. He is strongest among young people under 30, winning against Agnew by 68-29% and against Connally by 63-29% in this growing segment of the electorate.

Pair Adrift In Pacific Ate Turtles, Seagulls

Seoul (UPI) — A British couple who drifted for 117 days on a life raft in the Pacific said from the fishing boat that rescued them they had survived on rain water, turtles, seagulls and sharks.

Michael Bailey, 41, and his 22-year-old wife were picked up by a South Korean boat on June 30 but the story of their ordeal was not disclosed until they talked by radio with a Seoul newspaper.

"We are happy now," Bailey said, "but we will not sail a boat again."

Bailey, a printer, and his wife left England a year ago aboard an eight-ton yacht on an around the world voyage by way of New Zealand. They had left Panama on Feb. 26, they said, and the yacht sank six days later on March 4 when it collided with a whale about 400 miles off Mexico's western coast.

Then, they said, they pieced together two life rafts and began drifting.

They drank rain water, the Baileys said, and ate 30 turtles, eight seagulls and six sharks they caught with hooks fashioned from pins.

Seven vessels passed without seeing them, the couple said, before the Woolmi spotted them from a distance of about three miles and approached to make the rescue.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplaine

Ballyheigue — The national drink of Ireland is Guinness stout. It is drawn from a beer pump — usually with a brass handle that never needs polishing being constantly caressed by hand.

It is dark mahogany with an inch collar of creamy foam.

There's a technique to pulling the handle. A back and forth movement that puts a decorative swirl on top of the head.

The finest compliment you can pay the barman is, "He pulls a good glass of Guinness."

There are barmen in the pubs along the Liffey, they say, can pull a pint and put a foam shamrock on top so thick it lasts to the very bottom of the glass.

There was an airport strike at Shannon. The trans-Atlantic jets were overflying to London. The great runways on the green fields were silent and empty. Outgoing mail was uncertain.

"Your mail'll likely go to Dublin and then maybe to London and so back to the States," said the man in Ardfer. The postoffice in Ardfer is Maguire's pub and grocery store.

Between selling stamps, the owner pulls pints of Guinness and sells canned goods, Irish bacon and newspapers.

All along here is the Bay of Tralee. We are staying at Ardconnell farmhouse. Six bedrooms surrounded by a herd of dairy cows who come under our windows in the early morning and moo to be milked.

It is great country for the moppets — there are six other children here, English and Irish. We have a pony named Beauty and a puppy named Goofy.

This is the Ring of Kerry. Coves with small beaches all along the coast.

The busy little town of Tralee (12,000 pop.) is five miles away. Ballyheigue, much smaller, is a beach town five miles in the other direction.

Thirty miles toward the gray Atlantic, the Dingle Peninsula extends into the sea and a pocket of people still speak Gaelic. Scholars come here to practice speaking ancient Irish they've studied in school.

Gray mornings with a spit of rain from the Atlantic in the air. "Clearing in the afternoon," says the radio forecaster. (The optimist.)

"Irish weather is changeable as a woman's mind," says the barman in the White Sands at Ballyheigue. "It'll likely turn fine after lunch." (He was right. The sky turned blue and the sun came out like a gold coin.)

Directions are a problem in a country where everybody knows his way.

"Is this the way to Ballyheigue?" I asked.

"Ah," he said, "you're on the wrong road altogether now. Go back to the cross (crossroads) and to the top of the street (I never know which end is the 'top') and you'll see a cream building (only it turned out to be brown) and there you are." (Except it seemed that there I wasn't.)

"Guinness is good for you" is posted on walls and calendars. "It's a social drink," said the barman. "Surely you've heard that all Irish racehorses get a pint of Guinness a day."

"A pint for the horse and a pint for the trainer," he said. "It's written into their contract. There's nothing like Guinness for waking the blood in you."

The Irish, like the English, keep their pubs chill enough to hang meat in.

He pulled me a pint. "Try this to keep the chill from your bones," he said.

"Up the rebels," I said. The shamrock lasted clear to the bottom.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by Richard L. Worsnop, of Editorial Research Reports.)

WASHINGTON — A decade ago, Cuba was a major preoccupation of U. S. foreign policy-makers. The Castro revolution of 1959 was still fresh in mind, as were the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion of 1961 and the missile crisis of 1962. Thus, the United States successfully urged the Organization of American States (OAS) to adopt a series of resolutions, July 3, 1963, aimed at combating Cuban subversion in the Western Hemisphere. Economic sanctions against Cuba were approved by the OAS the following year.

Much has changed in the world since then. Under President Nixon's leadership, this country has dramatically improved its relations with China and the Soviet Union. Last February, the United States and Cuba concluded an agreement to discourage hijacking of aircraft or seagoing vessels. Given the prevailing spirit of detente, the pact stirred speculation that Washington was ready to embrace Havana as warmly as it had Peking and Moscow.

So far, nothing of the sort has happened. Robert A. Hurwitsch, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, explained why: "Basically, it is because neither Cuban policies toward the (Western) Hemisphere as a whole nor its activities and policies toward the United States can be regarded as friendly. Call it whatever you want — 'Cuban export of revolution,' 'Cuban subversive activities' — what it amounts to is that the Cubans have not abandoned their policies of supporting dissident elements in other countries."

Hurwitsch's view contrasts sharply with that of Jorge I. Dominguez, an assistant professor of government at Harvard's Center for International Affairs. Dominguez argues that Cuba has undergone a major transformation in its foreign relations over the past four years. Cuba's foreign policy today, he contends, "has two main features: (1) to obtain as many economic benefits as possible within the context of Soviet hegemony; while (2) contributing toward the erosion of U. S. hegemony in the Americas by luring Latin American governments, rather than trying to overthrow them."

This new policy has met with considerable success. In recent years, Cuba has established cordial relations with the new governments in Peru, Chile and Argentina. Other Latin American countries are expected to move away from the U. S.-sponsored quarantine of Cuba when the time is propitious.

The United States, however, is holding firm. One reason may be that there is no discernible advantage to this country in making a fundamental change in Cuba policy. Since the missile crisis, Cuba has not been a military threat. Cuban support of guerrilla movements in Bolivia, Colombia, Venezuela and other countries was unavailing. America no longer needs Cuban sugar. The inference is that U. S. policy-makers feel that they can safely ignore Cuba.

But not indefinitely. The sizable Cuban-American community will continue to agitate for liberation of the homeland, and the United States cannot afford to turn its back forever on an island that lies barely 75 miles south of Key West.

Basic changes in Cuban-American relations will take place when both countries decide that such a course is mutually beneficial. However, that moment of decision appears to be far in the future.

You're Just Nobody If You Miss The List

NEW YORK — Well, I've been waiting and waiting. For what? For the next edition of the White House black list, of course.

So far, nothing. Which forces me to face up to the awful truth: In the Watergate waltz I am only a wallflower.

And, while the old ego has taken some hard blows in its time, this is enough to make a columnist wonder what he's been doing right.

For myself, I might have been able to bear the rejection, maybe even laugh off that left-out feeling of being one of the select few who failed to make (as one wag puts it) "the Dean's list."

But picture, if you will, the face that's been lost in the bosom of the family. You'd think all my years of loving concern had been washed away in that one humiliating moment CREEP failed to tap me for treachery.

First, there was the long-distance call from New England. How come, asked what used to be considered a favorite daughter. Was I losing my vitriolic grip?

Just wait, I assured her. That was only a partial list. An updated one was in the works and should be out any day now. And if I didn't make that one, well... we're only three years from a new president. Maybe HE'LL find me hateful enough.

Then came the next call (collect, of course) from what used to be No. 1 son in the Southwest. Wanted to know if, now that I'd been passed over, I was tossing in the typewriter? (He always was a fresh kid.)

Just the same, it was hard to keep up a brave front while everybody else was taking bows for being nasty to Mr. Nixon. Oh, they played it off for paths, of course. Carrying on about their outrage and fear and righteous indignation.

But you could tell they were pleased. Who can blame them? How else can you get that close to Paul Newman?

And don't try to console me with the possibility that I may be included on some future "old buddies" list. Would YOU settle for John Wayne when you could have had Paul Newman? (I thought so.)

My wallflower status has one and two cold comforts, though. I've missed out on several fringe benefits conferred on some of the nominees.

For one thing, nobody's been around to snoop through my income tax return, although they're welcome to it, pitiful thing that it is. A few items in there might give them a welcome belly laugh during the dark days to come. (And it looks like there might be more than a few for the IRS.)

As far as I can tell, my bank account hasn't been "subject to special scrutiny." Not that it would do them any good.

I don't think anybody's been tapping my telephone, either. Although, with our phone company, it's a little hard to tell. Do electronic bugs make strange crackles and buzzings and earsplitting whistles?

So, while I may be put out at being passed over, I'm not vindictive. But I don't know. If they're going to act this way, I just might not say anything critical about the White House ever again.

$2 Million Spent on Housing Program At San Clemente And Key Biscayne

Drug Abuse In Military

Columnist Jack Anderson's assertion many months ago that drug abuse had reached epidemic proportions not only in Vietnam but in other far-flung U.S. military outposts has been supported by recent complaints from midwestern soldiers home on leave.

In the latest case, an Army private from Iowa who charged that there is widespread use of drugs at his station in Germany has been placed on temporary duty at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. The young private refused to return to Germany and he took his complaint to Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa and Rep. William Scherle, R-Iowa. A number of Nebraska soldiers have also complained recently about alleged drug abuses on U.S. Army posts in Germany.

The soldiers who are complaining apparently have no interest in using drugs and feel endangered because of their knowledge of what is going on and because they refuse to participate. If the situation is as bad as has been reported, those complaints are entirely legitimate.

The thought of what might happen to those servicemen who don't want to become involved in the drug scene, as well as what will happen to those who do, and the thought that western Europe's defense anchor may be on a perpetual drug trip, are distressing thoughts. And as bad as the alleged abuses is the Army's alleged posture in the matter.

The Iowa soldier charged that commanding officers in Germany refuse to acknowledge that the drug problem exists or don't know how big it is and his comments echo those of the Nebraska men who have reported drug abuse. Columnist Anderson has reported that Army spokesmen have continually sidestepped inquiries into the extent of the problem, which give rise to speculation over another army coverup.

Members of Congress are demanding an investigation into the allegations and it's hoped that the Pentagon will respond. Serious and widespread drug abuse on U.S. military installations would be bad enough without the military worsening the situation by attempting to gloss it over.

Matzke, Marvel To Meet

"If the Legislature can't get along with Stan Matzke, it can't get along with anybody," Gov. Exon commented upon his designation of Matzke as the new director of the Department of Administrative Services (DAS).

Matzke, who has presided over the state's economic development efforts, replaces the controversial Gus Lieske, who becomes head of the Executive Office of Management and Budget after a tenure as DAS chief during which his deteriorating relations with the Legislature came within a hair of losing for the governor a significant measure of his administrative power.

Matzke, a pleasant, reasonable fellow lacking Lieske's abrasive quality, has moved quickly to mend fences.

Road Away From Bigotry

DUBLIN — Inauguration of a Protestant to succeed President Eamon de Valera is yet another token of the more hopeful mood in Ireland that, with luck and patience, may lead to an end of the violence that has for so long savaged the north, helped onward by IRA activists from the south.

Erskine Childers, who comes from a religious minority of less than six per cent in this republic, nevertheless represents all the people both in his own mind and in theirs since they elected him chief of state. His father was a famous patriot who was executed during the civil war that followed independence.

Childers is a short man with dun-colored hair and slate-colored eyes. He constantly smokes a little hooked pipe and speaks beautifully articulated English, notable even in this land where fine speech is admired. He received me, dressed appropriately in green Irish homespun, in the splendid presidential residence at Phoenix Park, an immense country preserve in Dublin's center.

"I have been a member of the Dail (Parliament) 35 years," he said, "and a minister for 22 years. I never found my religion had the slightest effect on my political career. The heads of the Protestant church have made it quite clear that Protestants have a full and rewarding life in this country."

"But if election of a Protestant as president can demonstrate to the world at large and especially to the Unionists (Protestant party) of northern Ireland that we live in an ecumenical state, why then I am very glad. Maybe my election can help dispel the vestigial impressions of some people that we live in a sectarian state. I hope they will now see the light."

Childers is the second Protestant to head this republic, the first having been Douglas Hyde. But he comes to his post at a moment of peculiar historical importance. The two-thirds Protestant majority in northern Ireland is now being pushed by its extremists to oppose Catholic equality there and to fight all thought of association with the overwhelmingly Catholic south, an association that would logically some day lead to unification.

"Probably," says Childers, "my election will have a good effect on people who don't really understand the Irish situation. And I certainly would be delighted if I could help to stress this perhaps, if my prime minister and government were to approve, by inviting people of both communities in the north (Protestant and Catholic) to come and see me for purely social discussions."

"But that must be a governmental decision and I wouldn't want in any way to embarrass the ministers. The republic's basic policy couldn't be described as seeking Irish unification only by peaceful means. He replied: "There is complete unity of views on this. We have never sought to coerce the one million Unionists in the north to unwillingly join the republic."

"No president so far has participated much in the public life of the country. But I have pledged myself to support all policies and causes that are not politically disputed, especially planning long-range community consciousness of environment."

"During the next 15 years" (because of Common Market membership) "we will become rich and prosperous and we wish to preserve the national identity and the right environment for the young who will be growing up within that period."

"All governments tend to think of relatively short-term policies but the environment of the younger generation has never received sufficient attention. What will the country be like in 1990? That is what we must plan for. The president should be able to ask people to think about the future."

I inquired whether the

By DON WALTON

How to define Watergate? It used to be simply a living complex of apartments, offices and shops in Washington, a sedate symbol of money where the very comfortable hang out. Then it became the term used to describe the burglary of Democratic offices by agents of the Committee to Re-Elect the President and — perhaps — the White House.

Now its meaning has been considerably broadened to include all the "dirty tricks" and, much more important, the determined policies of espionage practiced on U. S. citizens by the Nixon administration.

Watergate now covers the waterfront.

As the Senate hearings resume tomorrow, Watergate returns to TV and to an even more dominant position in the newspapers. Press attention has centered on the question of whether President Nixon was aware of the break-in and whether he participated in the coverup. The hearings thus far point to the likelihood that we may never know for sure.

Sometimes lost in the emphasis on that particularly dramatic question is the established fact that the President approved clearly illegal and unconstitutional espionage against U. S. citizens.

Whether the President was aware of or participated in the Watergate burglary coverup or not, his activities in other aspects of the broadly defined "Watergate" mess should not be lost in the emphasis on the coverup itself.

IRS Does Fast Shuffle

WASHINGTON — The nation's 1,600 largest corporations, many of which strenuously resist audit of their tax returns by the Internal Revenue Service, have just been saved tens of millions in back taxes thanks to a go-fast order issued to IRS auditors.

Instructions were sent from Washington last October 27 informing agents they had a mere eight months, until June 1973, to finish examining all tax returns filed by the giant corporations prior to 1970. No extra agents were assigned to handle the huge workload.

The actual time spent auditing returns from companies with assets over a quarter of a billion dollars declined from 927 man-years in fiscal 1972 to 872 man-years in fiscal 1973. Result: shoddy audits of the industrial giants.

Many agents were understandably shocked when they received word from Washington. "You just didn't have time to do a proper audit," one agent complained. "All you could do was hit the high spots, drop all the other issues and get out by June."

A field auditor based in New York admitted the new directive forced him to ignore all dubious tax items under $10,000 in cases he was examining.

"It's ironic," still another agent confided, "but the one class of taxpayers who are most productive (in tax revenue) are getting a fast shuffle."

The official reasoning for the accelerated order was IRS concern that agents working on large cases had fallen too far behind in their work. So the new instructions were issued, in effect depriving the Treasury of millions.

Footnote: For its part, the IRS denies that recent audits are of low quality, citing use of computers and extra clerical help to assist beleaguered agents. However, such modifications were applied only to a fraction of the 1,600 cases under IRS review.

Lame duck Federal Trade Commissioner Mary Gardiner Jones recently vacationed in Israel at the expense of the taxpayer even though the FTC's travel office had refused to approve it.

So questionable was the journey that FTC Executive Director Basil Mezzines, who handles the commissioners' travel arrangements, would not sign her travel order. He bucked it to Chairman Lewis Engman who obligingly signed it to avoid a fuss with his volatile lady cocommissioners.

All told, the trip cost the taxpayers about $1,000 as tabulated from Miss Jones' expense accounts which we have obtained. The resourceful regulator got the government to pay the air fare for her week-long vacation by coupling it with an "official" visit.

Here's how she worked it: Her accounts show that she paid her own expenses in Israel for one week but charged the United States for expenses on the second week. Although the "official" part of her trip was at Israel's invitation, she admitted to us that she had doubts about taking the trip so close to her September departure from FTC.

"I wasn't sure the chairman would approve it," she conceded, then burst out: "Why are you trying to pillory a person who has given her life's blood to the consumer?"

Actually, Commissioner Jones' blood-giving to the consumer has been desultory. Earlier this year, she infuriated consumers by concealing FTC data about the conglomerate

Holding the governorship helps a party raise campaign funds and build future candidates.

Don Walton Broadened
Meaning

The President may not be guilty of trying to cover up the burglary. Who knows?

But he is guilty of approving the illegal and unconstitutional domestic "security" apparatus pieced together by his henchmen.

Still, the fact is that American voters overwhelmingly elected him to serve four more years in the White House.

And, amazingly, I think he would defeat Senator McGovern if an election were held today — despite Watergate and all its attendant evils.

Perhaps the people do not object to a president who commits such offenses as long as he preaches "basic values," wears an American flag lapel pin, boasts of American virtues and assails the long-hairs and radicals who threaten to disturb the established system of values.

Nebraska Democrats are looking ahead to the 1974 elections with great relief and unusually high hopes.

They generally believe Jim Exon has a lock on the governorship. That would give Democrats the Statehouse until 1970 and, in the process, add the office of lieutenant governor to the Democratic column.

Watergate could help Democrats in their bid to crack the all-Republican congressional stronghold. Nebraska Democrats win their rare congressional victories on the tide of occasional national resentment against Republicans.

Clair Callan rode in with the anti-Goldwater vote of 1964. Don McGinley and Larry Brock rode the tide of an anti-Republican farm (and town) revolt during the recession of 1958.

All three Democrats were removed after one term in office when Nebraskans returned to their Republican voting habit for national offices.

It could be, Democrats are hoping, that Nebraska voters may want to teach the GOP a lesson in 1974 as a result of Watergate. If they're right, and Democrats win a House seat or two, their job will then be to see if a Democratic congressman can be re-elected in this state.

Meanwhile, the Senate race of 1976 looms ahead. A re-elected Governor Exon should have a decent chance of breaking the 42-year Democratic senatorial drought that year if he can maintain his current popularity.

So Democrats are approaching the coming election year with unusual enthusiasm. It could be their year — and they know it.

A sign of their gathering excitement can be found in bumper strips sprouting across the state: "Don't Bug Me. I'm a Democrat."

The Saigon government has ordered its security forces in the field to continue to arrest and detain Viet Cong leaders under the controversial "Phoenix" program.

South Vietnam's official decree on the subject suggests, however, that the arrests be disguised by giving the communists a new name. "You may continue to apply measures of administrative detention," says a secret April 5 telegram from the prime minister's office, but "do not use the term 'communist criminal' or 'activities on behalf of the communists.' Just write disturb (ers) of the peace."

Under the joint American-South Vietnamese Phoenix program, communist cadres in South Vietnam were hunted down, arrested, detained without trial and in some cases murdered.

The Paris treaty was supposed to end such activities, but neither the communists nor Saigon have ceased their terrorist actions.

The Justice Department is finally looking into the payola and drugola scandal in the record industry, which was exposed in a series of columns beginning in March, 1972.

Meanwhile, we continue to get reports of dubious dealings in the disk industry. For example, a record promotion company, which the Better Business Bureau says has "all the earmarks of a 'song shark,'" is still doing mail business out of Baton Rouge, La. The Better Business Bureau says it has received numerous complaints about Ebb Harrison Sr., head of Ebb-Tide II and Golden Records.

Harrison told us the Better Business Bureau's charges were "hogwash," adding that "we live up to our contracts. It may take time, but when we do a record, it's a hit."

'Staple' In Cupboards Might Become Delicacy

By The Associated Press
Pork and beans — a staple on most Iowa kitchen cupboards — may soon be elevated to the status of a delicacy because of an economic crunch affecting a wide spectrum of Iowa supermarkets and wholesalers.

The laws of economics also are at work on such everyday products as lettuce and flour, food industry officials say.

Even that typically American fowl, the turkey, has taken on a new status because of rising prices.

Hy Vee Food Stores in Iowa are having problems with turkey hens, says spokesman Dwight Vandenberg of Chariton.

Freeze Rub
He explained in an Associated Press interview that wholesalers and supermarkets must abide by the price freeze, but producers can charge more.

Vandenberg speculated that homemakers may find that flour will all but disappear from neighborhood stores.

"Wheat prices was up like crazy a week ago," he recalled. The food company spokesman said his chain is "going to run out" of its "private label" pork and beans.

There also was a problem recently with Hy Vee's own brand of oleo.

High Cost
He explained that Hy Vee's supplier, Shedd-Bartush Co. of Omaha, closed down for a time because of the high cost of raw materials. The oleo firm couldn't pass on its higher costs to such firms as Hy Vee.

But the recently announced embargo on soybean exports drove down the price and Shedd-Bartush again was able to purchase soybean oil for oleo manufacture, he said.

Happy endings like that are in short supply, however. 7-Eleven stores, where customers can pick up a few needed items without facing large-volume supermarket shoppers, are having trouble with the cost of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Lettuce Problems
Bill O'Hare of 7-Eleven in Des Moines said lettuce prices two weeks ago were "so outrageous that our customers wouldn't buy it."

Bob Hallman, Des Moines, a purchasing manager for Sur Valu Stores, predicted a shortage in canned fruits until new supplies arrive next month. But he said a shortage might be alleviated if consumers control their buying.

No one accused farmers and other producers of arbitrarily driving up prices. Officials said labor costs on the farm have risen along with most other costs.

The buck, however, appears to stop with the wholesaler and processor.

Some executives blamed shortages of some commodities on the fact that the freeze doesn't extend all along the line from the fields to the supermarket shelves. Some felt that if producers were made to hold the line on prices, each step along the food chain could afford the products it needs.

Charles Colosimo says he's "getting enough produce," for his C & H Produce Co. of Des Moines — but that's because "I'm buying right."

Colosimo doesn't expect his good fortune to continue.

A lot of firms depend on Colosimo's company for produce, including Hy Vee. Dahl supermarkets in the Des Moines area, Hinky Dinky supermarkets, several independent grocers, Des Moines' four major hospitals and several restaurants.

Gardens Hurt
And it doesn't help that thousands of family backyards are sprouting vegetables, he added.

Every tomato plucked from a backyard plant is one tomato less purchases in a store, he observed.

Wholesalers and supermarkets aren't "trying to prove a point" by not offering staple foods.

Vandenberg said. There are just going to be "a lot of shortages."

State's 1974 Election Days Sneaking Up

By DON BEMAN
United Press International
May and November of 1974 may seem a long ways off to most during the hot and sometimes stormy July days of 1973.

But Nebraska's chief election officer, Secretary of State Allen Beermann, said it is none to soon for his office to prepare for two days in particular falling in those two months — election days 1974 — which cap campaigns sometimes having hot and stormy tones.

"We've got a lot of work to do and we're doing it right now," he said.

There are new forms to be gotten out, including the reporting forms for the state's new law governing campaign financing which are due before and after both the May primary and November general election, and new election books to be prepared and sent to the counties.

Next year, Nebraskans will run the gamut of statewide offices as well as decide who will represent the state in the House of Representatives in Washington. In addition, Beermann noted there are a host of district, county and local elections to be decided.

Appearing on the statewide ballot will be the names of candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney general, a workmen's compensation court judge and the question of whether to retain Supreme Court Chief Justice Paul White.

Then in various areas of the state, voters will decide the office holders for seats in the Legislature in districts having even numbers: the University of Nebraska Board of Regents members in the 5th and 7th districts; State Board of Education members in the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th districts; public service commissioners in the 4th and 5th districts; and retention of district court judges in the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, 10th, 13th, 18th and 21st districts.

"We haven't had a contested election in over 20 years," he said. "We have, however, had some recounts."

As to the new campaign finance reporting law passed by the Legislature this year, Beermann noted it carries "pretty stiff penalty clause."

Under the law, candidates must report finances or be subject to either losing the office won by election or pay a fine if not elected.

Scouts Endangering Insect, Weed Lives

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Seventeen field scouts are endangering the lives of insects and weeds in Clay County this year. A new program being tried on 36,000 acres of corn and milo is designed to monitor crop pests in an effort to learn more about when and how much pesticide to apply.

High school and college students with two weeks of special training and constant supervision are collecting weeds, plants that don't seem quite right and every insect they can find for the survey.

Data is carefully recorded for each field and will be compiled for a computer study at a later date.

The training the field scouts receive is limited to techniques of gathering and recording pests. The young adults are carefully instructed to avoid making any recommendations to farmers who own the fields used in the program.

The data is evaluated by pesticide specialists at the University of Nebraska and recommendations on treatment procedures are channeled to the farmer through the office of George Woolsey, Clay County agent.

80% Follow Up
The farmer can do anything with the information he wants including throw it away but Woolsey estimated 80% of the farmers would follow the treatment recommendations carefully.

Woolsey said he thinks the project has been valuable to farmers and would like to see some kind of a permanent field scout program developed.

"The farmers seem to like the program because they are coming in to see if they can have additional fields put into the program. We have had to cut off the new applications because we just can't handle any more," Woolsey said.

The program is a federally financed project designed to reduce the amount of pesticide accidents and to provide better control of insects and weeds.

"It probably would result in a smaller amount of pesticide used, but in some cases it will actually increase the amount of chemical used," he said.

Dr. Dave Keith, NU extension entomologist said, "It ought to reduce accidents to crops from using the wrong pesticide, improve the timeliness of the application and it should give beneficial insects a chance to control the pests."

Recommendations Sent
Weekly results of the survey are sent to each of the cooperating farmers and area news media representatives. Woolsey also prepares a special form with data about pests and recommendations for those farmers who have problems with pests.

The sheer size of the project in terms of acres covered is mind boggling to researchers accustomed to working with small plots.

"This is no 8' by 10' plot, but a study of pest activity on 36,000 acres of corn and milo. We are learning a lot about what is going on in a field that we never noticed before," said Walter Gary, who supervises the field scouts.

The young scouts, many of whom are studying insects or some aspect of agriculture, have had some interesting experiences.

One student reported that a farmer had advised him there couldn't possibly be any corn rootworms in his field because he had just checked.

The scout dug up a plant and showed the farmer six rootworms on the very first plant. The farmer just shook his head and slowly walked away.

Special Technique
"There is a special technique to finding the little things. We have been trying to teach it to farmers, but haven't been very successful," said Keith.

Federal officials involved in similar programs in other states say they hope local extension people, or perhaps even private enterprise, will take over the program in a few years.

"I think it might cost as much as $3 an acre, depending on how many services were involved. You could add soil testing and fertilizer recommendations without much increase in cost. Perhaps data on moisture and irrigation recommendations could be included to aid the farmer in making management decisions," Keith said.

Some commercial firms are already engaged in the operation of such services within the state. However, they are not yet generally available.

Another possibility is the development of a small state wide system of field scouts who would examine fields throughout the state in an attempt to spot early infestations of pests.

"One thing we have learned already is that there are a lot of minor pests there we never noticed before," Keith said. "They have to be reducing yields some. It is really hard to arrive at a recommendation as to when it is severe enough to pay the cost of treating the field," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

There are some lessons to be learned for those in the livestock marketing business at Joliet, Ill.

The Joliet stockyards started up as the Chicago yard died. It was a temporary affair at first, with a few portable pens, some trailer houses for offices and a lot of hard work by a group of dynamic livestock peddlers who felt the terminal market still had a place in the world if it was run correctly.

The operation has expanded to 34 acres with a huge luxury restaurant, modern office building, all new pens complete with their own water system, including a 500,000-gallon water storage tank.

The yard is expecting its millionth animal sometime this year and appears to be in business to stay.

Perhaps some of the old-time traditionalists from the stockyards in Omaha, Sioux City, Kansas City, St. Paul and St. Joe should be taking notes. They that modernizes can survive after all.

Sometimes you get kind of fuzzy brained when you try to figure out why people protest food prices. What gets to me is why they don't complain about other prices.

Mar-Gale Farms near Springfield, Mo. had a real problem. What to do with the manure from their cows.

In desperation they put in a bottling system, liquified the manure, treated the stuff so it wouldn't smell and offered it for sale in gallon jugs.

Now comes the part you are not going to believe. They get $3.19 for the gallon of liquid manure and $1.27 for a gallon of milk.

The manure demand is so big, they are contracting with other farmers to put in manure pits and are building a portable bottling plant to go around to farms regularly to process the stuff.

It costs a lot less to process than milk, too. The whole manure plant cost $400 while a dairy plant can easily run more than $100,000.

The whole affair became possible when Richard Briggs of Woodbury, Tenn. developed a workable additive to mix with the manure. Without the additive, the stuff will ferment in the bottle and eventually explode.

I am happy they solved their pollution problem but I still think somebody has a weird sense of values when they pay $3.19 for a gallon of manure but only $1.27 for a gallon of milk.

This spring a lot of soybean growers were worrying about what Brazil would do to their market. Increased livestock production in South America has absorbed that country's crop to the point where the government banned soybean exports.

That ban resulted in discouragement for the local farmers, who are cutting back production. It removes the threat to the American market for a while.

There is a lesson there for the U.S. government. When you reduce the opportunity to sell a food product, the farmers will quit raising it.

If you don't like the flavor of the last tomato you bought at the store, it may not be an American's fault.

In the last ten years, imports of tomatoes from Mexico have more than doubled. Now 99% of the imported tomatoes come from Mexico and as harvesting costs rise the imports will too.

Florida still produced 55% of the tomatoes eaten in the U.S., but Mexico is a close second with 43%. Already there are months when we import more than we grow.

Mexico tightly controls quality and has picking and shipping holidays. There were 14 such no pick or sell days in February and March.

During the past winter, the Mexican share of the American market rose to 80%, which tended to lower prices even in Mexico.

They have also limited exports to tomatoes more than two inches in diameter and at times the size limit is even higher to force prices up.

Even so, they are generally selling the love apple for less than we can grow it here in the U.S. on a commercial basis.

In case you didn't know it, the tomato was once called a love apple and thought to be poisonous. The idea apparently was for lovers who could not marry to consume the fruit as a final protest against parents, etc.

There is a lesson there for the

Family Farm, Ecology Youth Institute Topics

Topics will range from careers in agriculture to ecology to preservation of the family farm for 150 delegates to the annual Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute (NAYI).

The program began Sunday and continues through Friday at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

The youth, representing all areas of the state, will hear views on agriculture from such guest speakers as the Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture, the founder and president of Women for the Survival of Agriculture, a Kansas State legislator and the executive director of the Wisconsin Agribusiness Council.

"The Institute attempts to supply young Nebraskans with the knowledge and skills necessary to provide better social and economic development of rural communities," said Roger Sandman, assistant director of agriculture.

The 150 delegates and 20 youth counselors were chosen, he said, for their potential as future leaders in the state's agricultural industry. Recommendations came from school teachers and administrators and county extension agents.

A group dynamics session and orientation to the institute are on Monday's schedule, along with an evening program on water safety and wildlife conservation.

Tuesday morning Jack Burwell, a young Kansas House of Representatives member, will address the group. Often controversial Mrs. Jacqueline Furber of New York, a farm wife who heads Women for the Survival of Agriculture, will discuss the topic for which her organization was founded and named.

The nation's youngest head of a state agriculture department and a national newsmaker, Jon M. Wetald of Minnesota, is scheduled to address the institute Wednesday concerning preservation of the family farm.

The same day, ecology is the topic of a session with Dr. Charles Wallace of Pan American University in Edinburg, Tex., followed by Dr. Ronald Brenchley of the Monsanto Co. discussing the "Balance of Nature Myth."

Foreign marketing of Nebraska products, and exploration of agriculture-related careers are topics for panel and workshop discussions on Thursday. Final workshops and evaluation sessions on Friday complete the busy schedule.

Highway Death Toll Up By Two

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska highway fatality toll stood at 196 Sunday, compared with 207 on July 8, 1972, as a result of separate accidents which brought death to two persons.

Larry Stagemeyer, 22, of Beaver City, was killed Sunday in a one-car accident about four miles west of Beaver City on Highway 89.

The State Patrol said his west-bound car rolled four times throwing him out and then pinning him beneath it.

Lavonia M. Williams, 19, of Omaha, was killed late Saturday night in a single car crash east of Lincoln at the junction of Route 77 and Interstate 80.

The State Patrol said the east-bound car left the road, rolled and pinned the victim beneath it.

Chadron 'Dead Horse Fire' Reported Officially Controlled

CHADRON, (AP) — The National Forest Service called the forest and timber fire in northwestern Nebraska "officially controlled" Sunday after it burned about 30 square miles.

No one was injured. The fire, which broke out Friday in Dead Horse Canyon, still had a 250 man crew on the front line Sunday in mop-up operations. The fire was dubbed the "Dead Horse Fire" by officials.

Ag Engineer Urges Hauling Farm Tractors

Rather than drive farm tractors and equipment along roads, it is much safer to haul them on a trailer or truck, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension agricultural engineer points out.

Such slow moving equipment does not stand much of a chance in a hassle with high speed traffic, according to D. E. Lane.

However, loading and unloading such equipment can be dangerous if not done properly, he said.

This is why Tractor Power and Safety Day, July 26, at the University's Field Laboratory at Mead, will include demonstrations of how to load and unload equipment safely, he said.

The procedure also includes how to place the equipment properly on the trailer or truck and how to tie it down securely.

An example of the need for safety instruction on the subject is a man who was backing a tractor from a truck, hit the brakes, and tipped the tractor on his son, Lane said.

Aerial surveys indicated that 800 acres of Nebraska National Forest land was blackened or a total of 2,300 acres, including both private land and state land at Chadron State Park.

The Forest Service said the total of scenic Pine Ridge area acres destroyed was about 3,100. A majority of the destroyed land was private property, a Forest Service spokesman said.

The fire ignited no buildings in Chadron State Park, which was evacuated at the height of the fire. It was estimated that about 200 persons were evacuated from cabins and camping areas.

Supt. Roger McClure of the park credited the help of several hundred volunteers with saving

Frog Owners Will Spring Into Action

Frog owners or renters will spring into action in Yutan next Sunday at the annual frog jumping contest.

In a news release, the founders of the Secretary of State Frogmen said they are ready to jump at the chance to defend their honor against all comers, particularly the "Everrodd Frog Machine."

Proclaiming themselves the most disorganized frogging operation in the area, the group, led by Nebraska's Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann, issued a call to defeat "organized frogging" as epitomized by Lt. Gov. John Everrodd.

All people willing to leap into their cars and hop over to Yutan are invited to the annual affair.

buildings and the park as a whole. He estimated that from 250 to 300 persons volunteered to fight the weekend fire.

"I never knew we'd have so many park lovers," he said. The volunteers did everything from driving machines to working on fire lines with shovels putting out blazes that jumped trenches.

Forest fire experts from several Western states, two airplanes, six fire departments, national guardsmen, state and local firemen joined volunteers in battling the blaze.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Wheat Storage More Of Worry Than Fuel?

As the 1973 wheat harvest moves into Nebraska, the much-publicized fuel shortage may take a back seat to the shortage of transportation and storage space.

"Reports are that the storage situation in Kansas is critical," said Marx Koehnke, chief of the Nebraska Wheat Division. "There is talk of piling wheat on the ground, and some country elevators may be forced to close until transportation arrives to move the bumper crop," he said.

The storage problem is not expected to extend into Nebraska in such proportions, according to Koehnke, because of larger on-farm storage capacity here. "Information we have," he said, "is that elevator and farm storage space is adequate for the harvest."

Howard Elm, executive secretary of the Nebraska Grain and Feed Dealers Association confirmed that "with what elevator and farm space we know we have, most of the crop can be put away."

Elm said it is estimated about half of the 450-million bushel storage capacity in the state is full from previous crops. The 1973 crop is estimated at 100-million bushels.

'Space Available'
"Most elevators have some space available," he said. "The only problem seems to be that it might not all be located in the right area."

Elevators may not, however, be paying cash for the new crop because of the storage and transportation situation, Elm noted. Larger operators in particular, he said, "have had too much money invested in too much grain for too long, and they don't know when they'll be able to get cars to move it."

Elevator operators probably won't price grain or pay the farmer for it until it is shipped, said Elm. At best, the price for immediate shipment will be better than that for movement when the transportation is available.

Don Lehr, manager of the Far Mar Co Omaha Division, agreed that some members of the cooperative will be slow in paying for new grain. "A good percentage is going to try to pay upon receipt," he said, "while others will pay as soon as transportation is contracted."

Lehr said, "The railroad cars just aren't going to be there" to ship grain to terminals, and Far Mar Co members are looking for trucks to move the crop." He said storage at the cooperative's terminals in Lincoln, Omaha and Fremont is ample if the transportation can be arranged.

Truck Shortage
"There may be a shortage of trucks related to the fuel shortage," Lehr confirmed.

Fuel supplies are not expected to cause a shortage of harvesting equipment in the state, however, according to Director of Agriculture Glenn Kreuscher.

"The fellows (custom cutters) who have been in the state on a regular basis will be coming through," he said. "They generally have fuel supplies lined up in advance along with their regular harvesting jobs."

"The ones who probably won't be out," he continued, "are the free-lance cutters who go around scouting for work."

Elm agreed that fuel supplies for the harvest don't appear to be a major problem. He said some of the major oil companies intend to bring in additional supplies during July, and some dealers in rural areas have told him, "We'll see that they get fuel on the farm, even if the town people have to go without."

$30,000 Grant Awarded For Research On Cancer

The American Cancer Society has awarded a grant of $30,000 to the University of Nebraska Medical Center to continue support of Dr. Sidney S. Mirvish's research on cancer producing agents in food.

Dr. Mirvish's research on the formation of carcinogenic compounds occurring in food started its third year July 1. Dr. Mirvish is an associate professor of biochemistry at the Medical Center and a professor at the Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer and Allied Diseases, where he has conducted this research.

The thrust of the future study will be on chemical analysis of foods and stomach contents to evaluate whether the production of N-nitroso compounds, either in foods or in the stomach, is important in human cancer. Also, studies will be continued on the chemistry of the formation of nitroso compounds.

Dr. Mirvish has produced lung tumors in mice by giving them chemicals which can produce nitroso compounds. He will continue this aspect of the work by making some new nitroso compounds and testing them in rats.

Religious Community Shuns Lust For Money, Illicit Sex

MOUNDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — "We are trying to set up an ideal community for the whole world," said Sama Kunda, standing in the sun on the cobblestone walks of New Vrindavan.

He pointed to the milkhouse, the white frame temple, the rose garden and a slight crook in the shallow, limestone creek that serves as the bathing area. A fellow devotee dressed in a butter-colored robe, his head shaved except for the braided stub of a top knot, guided his horse-drawn plow over a five-acre field on a distant slope.

"We will build our community without all the modern facilities that do not make people happy," said Sama Kunda, who was born Steve Olney and comes from Washington, D.C.

"We live here without lust for money or illicit sex life to develop our love of God."

After almost five years of existence, the communal farm of New Vrindavan has spread across 350 acres of rugged West Virginia countryside and become home to some 90 young ascetics.

The community is named after the Indian village that was the birthplace of Krishna, the Hindu God of the ancient Vedic scriptures.

Its spiritual leader is Kirtsnananda Swami, the 36-year-old son of a Baptist preacher who dropped out of Columbia University graduate school seven years ago and joined a newly emerging sect, the International Society for Krishna Consciousness.

Swami founded the northern West Virginia communal farm of New Vrindavan in 1968. The farm is supported by donations and sales of incense and milk products.

Three weeks ago six men broke into the temple during an early morning service.

Those present said the men ripped two star-shaped chandeliers from the ceiling, cracked the marble altar, smashed idols and fired pistols into the air. Someone poked the barrel of a shotgun through one stained glass window and fired, wounding four persons.

Kenneth Elmore, of Louisville, Ky., was charged with felonious assault in connection with the raid. He is free on $500 bail. Police say they are searching for another man in the case.

The invaders demanded to know the whereabouts of the daughter of one of their number, Swami said. He said the girl has never been in the community.

The Hare Krishna people cite other incidents of harassment.

"Sometimes they just ride by and yell things at us," said Sama Kunda. "Kids have let the horses out, and about six months ago they started tearing up our farm machinery and shoving it into the road. They used to come around at night carrying baseball bats, but now the people come with guns."

A local justice of the peace issued warrants last week for persons involved in throwing firecrackers at Hare Krishna followers on July 4.

The raid prompted some additional security precautions.

"We have provided ourselves with a few weapons that are in the hands of our boys," Swami said. "I do not want to take elaborate measures because it is not good for the consciousness of the people here."

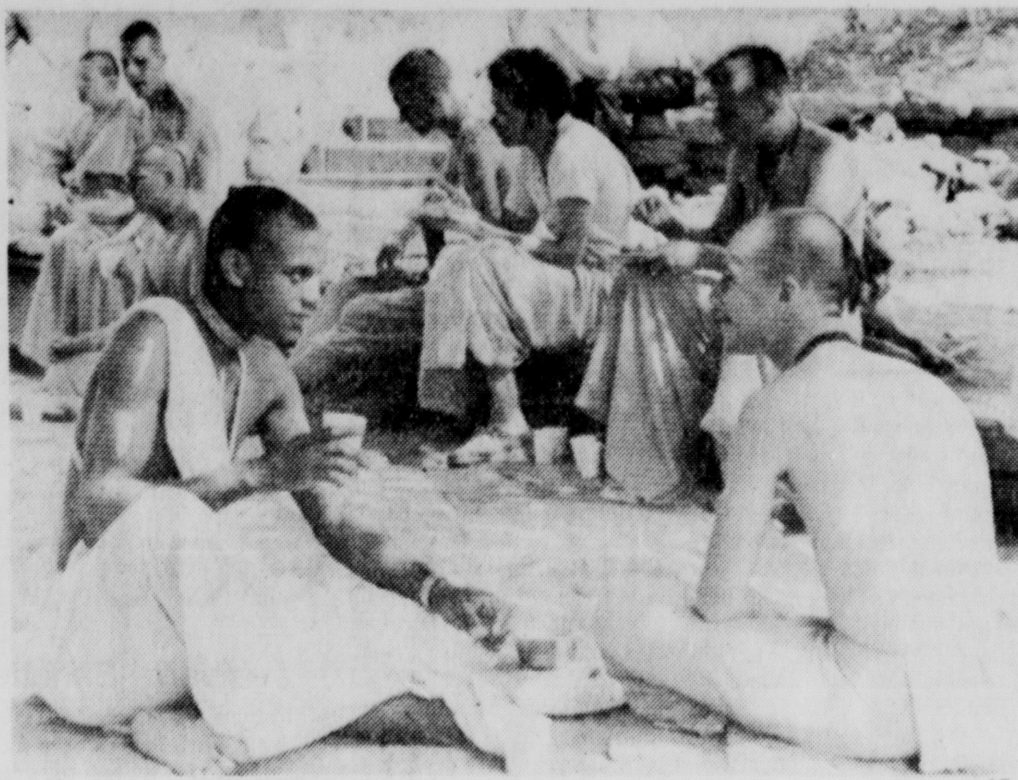

Many neighbors complain that during religious festivals large numbers of young mendicants come from all over the United States and block roads, trespass on private property and pick flowers.

"I'd say the majority of people I've talked to around here are not happy that they're here," said state trooper P.E. Paine. "It's not because of any trouble they make, but because they're odd."

Swami said: "I think the worst that anybody can say about us is that occasionally someone walks across their land or picks a flower. If we can keep it at that level we will be very fortunate."

Swami said anyone may come and live in New Vrindavan as long as he follows the four restrictive principles of the cult: no meat eating, no illicit sex, no intoxication and no gambling.

The majority of the devotees are in their early 20s, children of the upper middle class with roots in hippie and drug cultures.

DEVOTEES... take a break from daily chores.

Swami said future plans call for acquisition of another 300 acres of farmland, eventual construction of seven temples on hills surrounding the community and establishment of the West's first Institute of Vedic Culture.

A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, who came to the United States from India in 1965 to spread the faith, has shaped a hard-core group of about 1,000 devotees across the country.

With the exception of those who stay on the communal farm at New Vrindavan, members live in large cities and gather on street corners and market places, burning long sticks of incense, singing and generally attempting to elevate the souls of nonbelievers by chanting the name of Krishna.

Devotees begin each day on the communal farm by gathering to...

After classes in the scriptures, members go about their various daily tasks: cultivating the fields, building new cottages, washing the walls and marble floor of the temple, tending the flower gardens or preparing dairy products for export to the society's 80 urban communities.

In the evening, devotees again gather in the temple.

"We want to spread this consciousness that everything belongs to God," said Swami. "We would like everyone to become Krishna conscious."

Anheuser-Busch Beer Bottlers Vote To Accept New Contract

St. Louis, Mo. (UPI) — Members of two unions at Anheuser-Busch Inc. overwhelmingly voted Sunday to accept a contract that provides for substantial improvements in pension benefits.

"This agreement will be watched at other AFL-CIO locals throughout the country," said James Kennedy, corresponding secretary for Beer Bottlers Local 187.

"There is nothing to compare at other breweries in terms of the improvements in the entire contract package."

Negotiators for the unions had given their tentative approval to the pact Thursday and called employees back to work after a 10-day strike. The action enabled the south St. Louis plant, the world's largest brewery, to resume production Friday.

The ratification vote was 889-4 on a standing vote taken at a joint membership meeting of Local 187 and Lab Technicians Local 262.

The three-year contract, retroactive to March 1, calls for a wage increase of $1.04 per hour over three years, with 54 cents in the first year, 50 cents in the second year and no increase in the third year. The previous contract called for an hourly wage of $5.67.

The key issue in the dispute was the question of improved financing of the unions' basic and early retirement plans. The company agreed to use money saved from jobs eliminated by automation and put it onto the unions' retirement plans.

Under the new early retirement plan, eligible employees can retire at age 62, at which time they draw an early retirement benefit of $300 a month for married men and $225 for single men. In addition, they draw their basic monthly pension which is $12 for each year of employment. At 65 the early retirement benefit stops but the benefit under the basic plan continues.

NAACP May Expel Atlanta Branch If School Integration Spat Not Settled

©The New York Times

Atlanta — Officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Sunday the organization would expel its Atlanta branch if the branch did not yield to the national organization in a school integration dispute.

The decision was taken at a secret meeting of the national board of directors at the annual convention in Indianapolis last week, according to sources on the board.

The Atlanta branch and the national office in New York have been involved in a serious dispute over the plan since February. The plan would accept a minimum of school integration in Atlanta in return for the assignment of blacks to top administrative positions in the school system.

National officials, as well as other members of the civil rights group, saw acceptance of the plan as backing away from the association's goal of school integration. The national organization had ordered the Atlanta branch to repudiate the plan. When the branch refused, its officers were suspended.

At last week's convention the national board upheld the suspensions and issued an ultimatum. According to the announcement then, the branch would be given 30 days to repudiate the plan. If it did not, its officers would be removed and new officers would be installed.

However, board sources disclosed Sunday that a secret board meeting had been held after the first meeting. It was decided then to expel the branch if it did not yield, the sources said.

According to King, the compromise was to enable blacks to get control of the system from white officials, whom he accused of undermining past integration efforts, and to try to curtail further movement of whites out of the city.

Atlanta is 52% black, while the school system is 80% black.

The immediate reaction to the newly disclosed ultimatum was defiance, led by Maynard Jackson, vice mayor of Atlanta and a member of the local NAACP board.

Newport Jazz Festival In New York Is Artistic Success But Financial Failure

NEW YORK (AP) — The Newport Jazz Festival in New York ended with a sold-out concert Sunday night — an artistic success and a financial failure.

George Wein, who staged the 10-day festival, said he would lose money, mainly because he put on too many events — 56 in all — some of which conflicted with each other in timing. Last year there were fewer events and Wein said he made $12,000.

The final event was a concert in the 16,000-seat Nassau Coliseum by Duke Ellington, Ray Charles and Aretha Franklin.

The last concert in New York City itself was Saturday night, in Carnegie Hall. It was called "So-Lo Piano" and was dedicated to the late Art Tatum. Ten pianists played, ranging from 90-year-old Eubie Blake who brought the house down with some ragtime he'd written, to Brooks Kerr, who is in his 20s and played the stride style he learned from the late Willie "The Lion" Smith.

The festival — brought to New York last year from Newport, R.I. — had an abundance of high points. Gerry Mulligan started it off, seven minutes early, at a noon concert in Central Park June 29, in a rainstorm. That night the Benny Goodman Quartet was on the Carnegie Hall stage for the first time since 1938.

There was a ride on the Staten Island ferry with a New Orleans band; a July 4 program in honor of Louis Armstrong, and lots of opportunities to see and hear stars now in retirement as well as those still performing.

The roster of names read like a who's who of jazz: Ella Fitzgerald, Dizzy Gillespie, Louis Jordan, Helen Humes, Barbara Campbell, Ellington, Ellis Larkins, Dave Brubeck.

Concerts were held at Philharmonic Hall, Carnegie Hall, the Apollo Theater, Radio City Music Hall, Wollman Amphitheater in Central Park, Louis Armstrong Memorial Stadium — the Singer Bowl in Queens, renamed for the occasion — Shea Stadium and Nassau Coliseum. The New York Musicians, more experimental players, were in Alice Tully Hall, and those for whom that was too "establishment" went to Ornette Coleman's loft for music.

Last year's budget was $600,000, this year's $1 million. Wein says he doesn't know how big the loss will be, but there will be one, even counting contributions from the New York State Arts Council and such companies as Schlitz which sponsored "The Life and Times of Ray Charles" and American Airlines which sponsored "Salute to Count Basie" and "A Jazz Salute to the American Song."

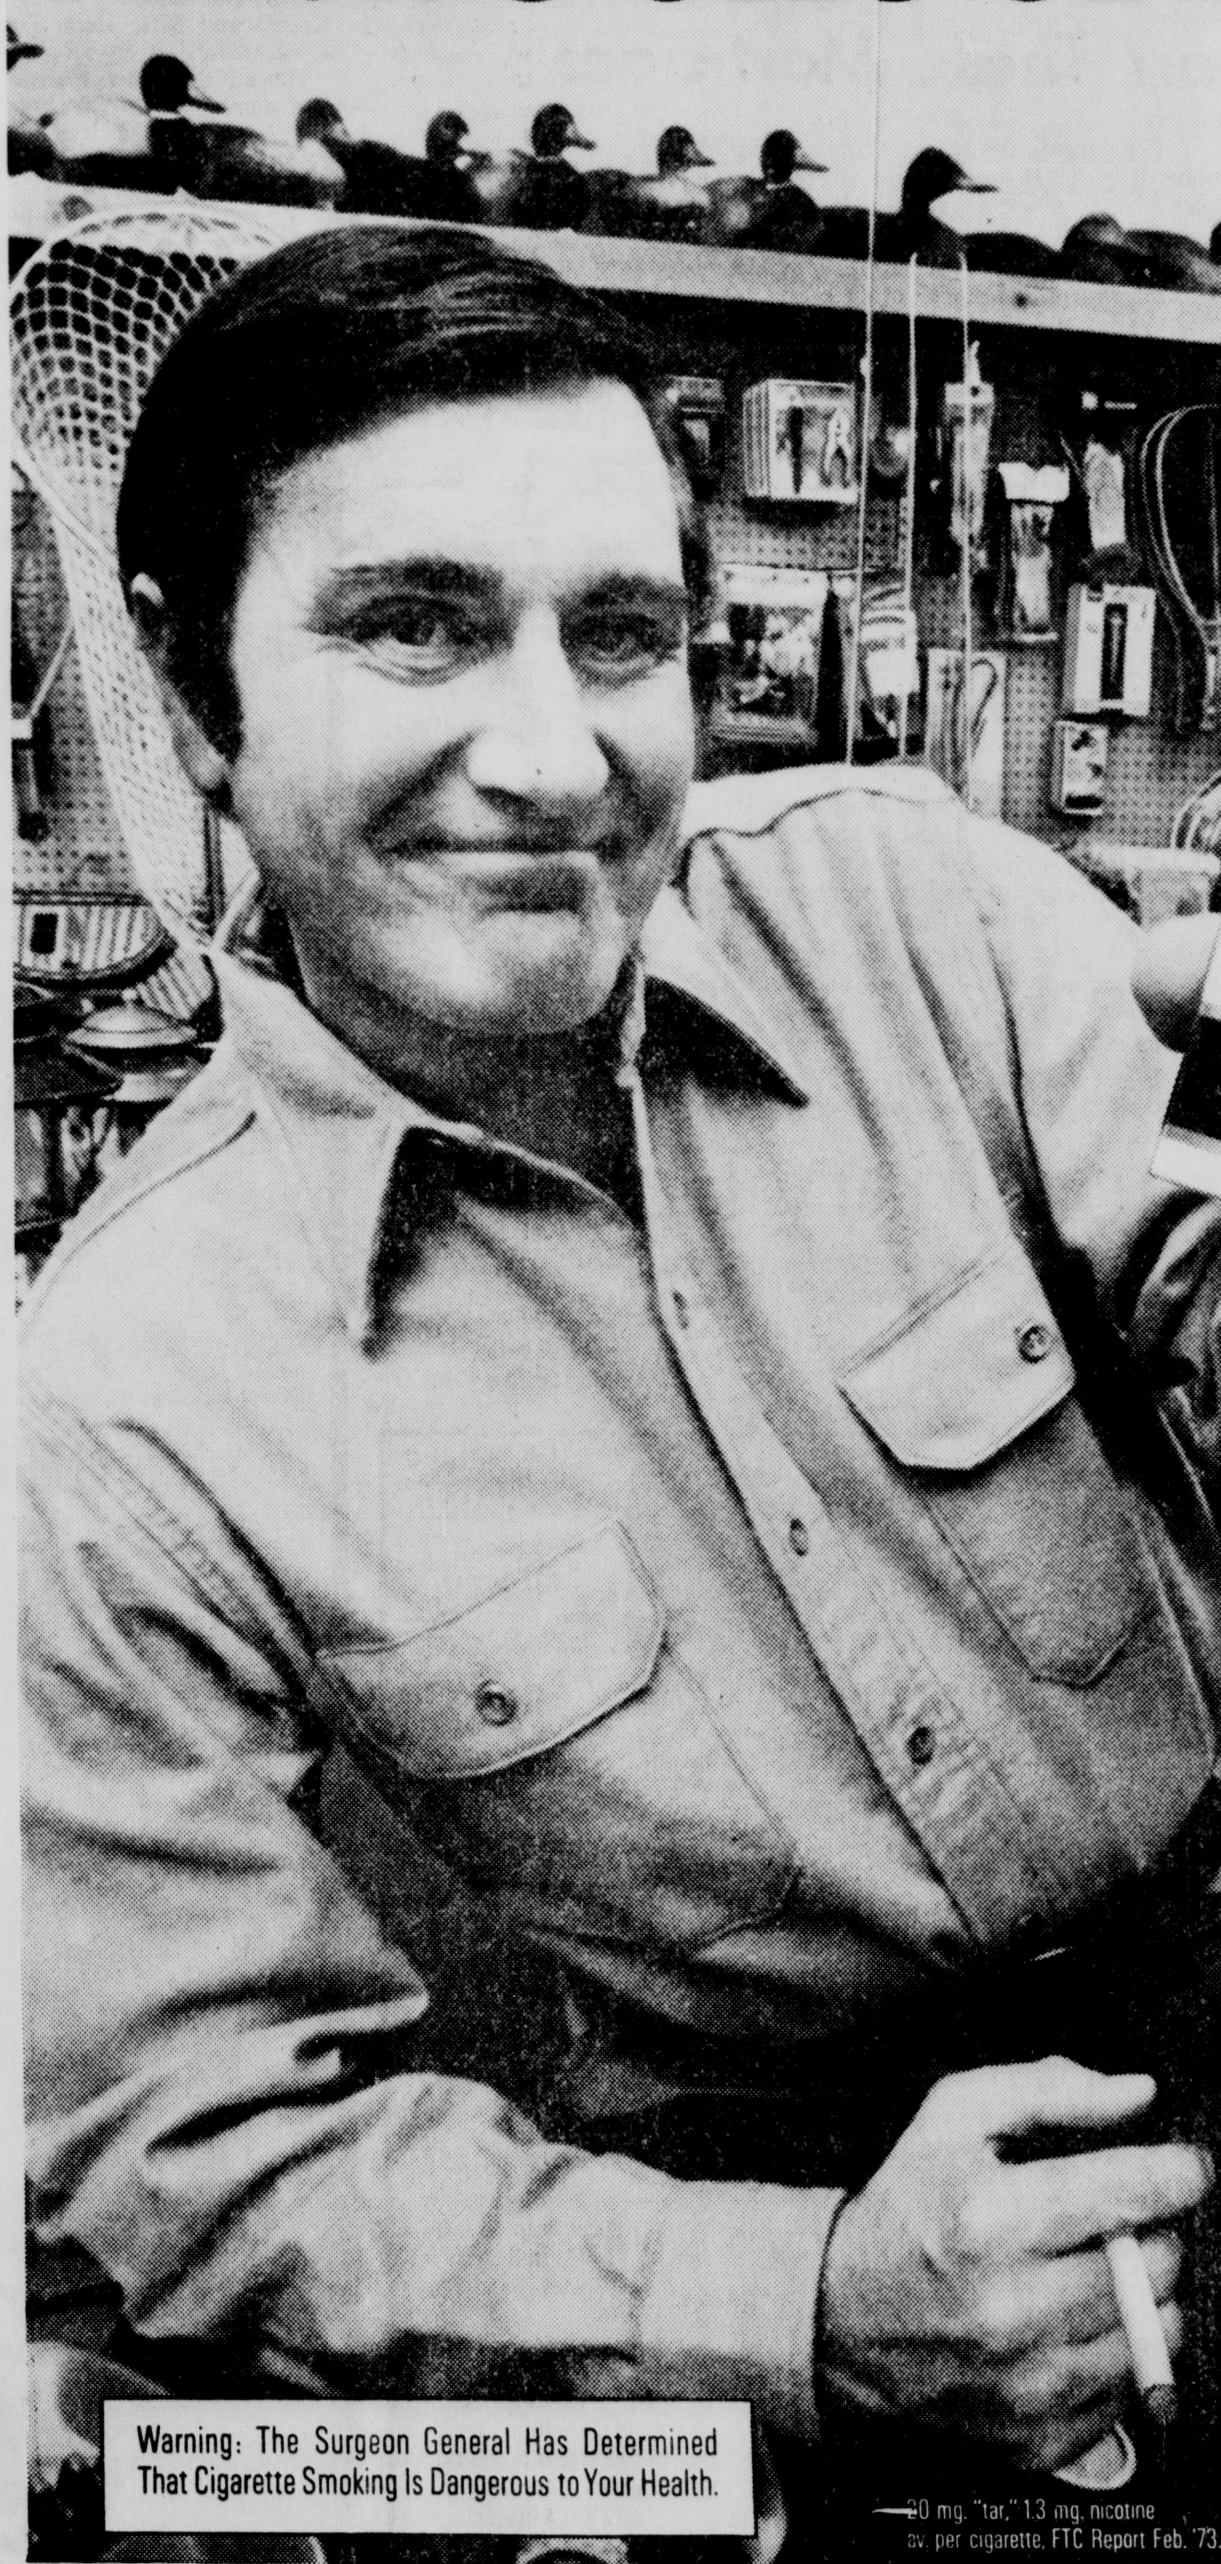

Wein says he'll do it again next year, but smaller, without afternoon concerts in Central Park or night concerts in Shea Stadium.

"We could cut this festival in half and still have a big, big festival," said Wein.

She Won't Sing In Smoke

Hollywood (UPI) — The sophisticated Las Vegas nightclub crowd was dumbfounded when the shapely, sexy singer stopped in the middle of her act and asked the audience to snuff out their cigarettes.

It wasn't a new wrinkle in Vikki Carr's act, it was a necessity.

Last January Vikki was forced to cancel her last two days at the Riviera Hotel because of a sore throat.

It was terrible, the vocalist remembered. "My lungs were burning and my throat was so tender I couldn't sing. I was told by some doctors that I had nodes on my vocal chords."

"But I flew to Texas to go through the Houston Medical Center. The specialists there told me I was allergic to smoke, smog and changes in weather. They gave me some serum with which I inject myself every week."

Vikki doesn't smoke. Never has. But the majority of nightclubbers who watch her perform light up like blast furnaces.

"The specialists told me the smoke in a nightclub was more than enough to cause me a great deal of pain and affect my throat so badly I wouldn't be able to sing at all," Vikki said.

"When I opened at the Riviera this time I sang a couple of songs and felt my throat and lungs beginning to burn again. So I stopped the music and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I was sick the last time I appeared here because of cigarette smoke. For the next 45 or 50 minutes would you kindly refrain from lighting a cigarette. My voice would appreciate it, my life would appreciate it, and most importantly so would yours."

"Every single person in that audience put out his cigarette and applauded. I did the same thing every night for two weeks."

"Each time the people put out their smokes, except one night an elderly gentleman sitting right in front lighted up. Everyone could see him. So I just moved the microphone a few tables away. The crowd applauded and the man put out his cigarette."

Vikki said performers stand in the wings before they go on stage and often see nothing of the audience except a thick layer of blue smoke.

"It's worse when you're on stage because most of the time there is a blower above your head vacuuming up the smoke to circulate the air. You end up with smoke in your hair and gown that reeks to high heaven."

"That's one of the reasons performers prefer to appear in concerts or theaters rather than clubs. People don't smoke in those places."

"I don't think audiences realize how much they smoke when they're watching a nightclub act. They're drinking and having a good time and light one cigarette after the other."

"The doctors in Houston said someone like me who has worked in clubs for 15 years can suffer as much lung damage as a person who smokes. Well, I don't need that."

"Singing in a smokeless room for two weeks was pure heaven, I sang better than I ever have before. And I never felt so well."

"It wouldn't surprise me if club owners began sectioning off the front tables for non-smokers. Bill Harrah, who owns Harrah's Club in Reno, is already starting the trend."

Mrs. Beats Ms. In Survey

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Several months ago I had a little questionnaire in my column asking readers to write to tell me which they prefer to be called, Miss, Ms. or Mrs.

I promised the results and here they are. Of all the women who wrote 76% preferred Mrs. and 75% of these women were both housewives and business or professional women. Fifteen per cent liked Ms. and 9% chose Miss or didn't care.

During the next four days I will bring you some of the letters which have been weeded out of the mail I received. I myself read 600 letters.

The letters did have definite trends. For instance over and over again, women wrote that they love being call Mrs. because of the way they feel about their husbands.

In fact, the things you wrote about how proud you are of him and how much you love him made me hope that you tell him what you told me — often!

Also, there was great resentment shown toward the title Ms. Many women are refusing mail addressed that way. I think the main reason is that it is being forced on them without their consent. Also many of the women who did not like it feel that only career women or nuts do. This is not true, as you will see from the letters.

On the other hand many of those who favor Ms. feel that married women are smug and that they oppose it because they just live through their husbands. The letters will disprove this also. Many are successful professional women.

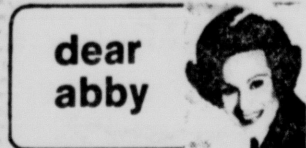

There were many many letters from women who are divorced. Ms. can solve some problems for this group. The question of safety was mentioned often, as you will see.

There were many complaints about the term "housewife." I do not like it either. It sounds as though a woman is a wife only when she is in the house. "Homemaker" and "home manager" were suggested.

I am going to give two days to letters in favor of Mrs. and two days to those in favor of Ms.

Miss, Mrs., or Ms. — most women want to keep slim and trim. Josephine Lowman's 9-day "Bulge and Budget Beater Diet" is very popular for weight watchers. For your booklet send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Report Those Morticians

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I was seriously injured in an accident. While still in the hospital and in such shape I was wondering whether I'd pull thru. I received flowers from the owners of a local funeral home! I can't tell you how this depressed me.

A few days later, these two morticians and their wives came to the hospital to visit me. I knew these people only slightly and had never socialized with them.

I think trying to drum up business this way is in very poor taste. I can't imagine what other reason they would have for sending flowers and visiting me.

How do you feel about morticians hustling prospective customers this way?

ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: Such hucksterism would annoy the Funeral Directors Association more than it depressed you. For your convenience, their address is 135 W. Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53203. The ethical mortionicians would appreciate it if you'd report these duds.

DEAR ABBY: About two years ago I met an accountant in a bowling alley. Every night we'd have a few beers together and we became good friends. One night my friend told me his sister had invested in some stocks and had a very good week financially. Since I was going to make a deposit in the bank the next day, I suggested to my friend that I would give him $1,000 instead to invest in the stock market.

The next day I gave him $1,000 in cash in my car (no witnesses), and since we were friends I didn't ask for a receipt or anything.

We agreed that we would split the profit from the stock 50-50 — half for him because he was an accountant and knew about stocks, and half for me because it was my money.

Then I started to work nights and couldn't bowl, but I kept in touch with him by phone. After a year and a half, the stock remained the same, so I told him to sell it and return my money.

You guessed it. I was stuck! He said I couldn't prove anything as I had no receipt.

I went to three lawyers and they all told me to chalk it up to experience. Can you help me get my money back?

STUCK IN AMSTERDAM

DEAR STUCK: If three lawyers told you the same thing, you had better believe it. It seems a pity that you have to suffer such a grave injustice, but without some proof of the transaction you are indeed stuck.

DEAR ABBY: Robbie and I are both 26 and have been happily married for over a year. But one problem, which will probably sound ridiculous to you, has me at the end of my rope. Please don't laugh.

Abby, his heels are so rough that sleeping in the same bed with him is actually hazardous! His heels rake and scrape my poor sensitive legs and feet at night and leave my skin sore.

I have tried every way I know to end this nocturnal battle. I've purchased softening lotions and pumice stones and have placed them in or by the shower where he has to see them. The result? Zilch!

Please, Abby, suggest some way I might persuade him to use something on those heels of his to relieve my discomfort.

ROBBIE'S MUTILATED SPOUSE

DEAR SPOUSE: Quit playing games. At bedtime, tell Robbie you have a treat for him, then YOU tenderly apply the lotion to his rough heels. Presto! Problem solved.

DEAR ABBY: In my dentist's office there is a sign which reads, "For your health's sake and the comfort of others, please don't smoke."

How do you like it?

A FAN IN BOULDER

DEAR FAN: Like it? I love it! Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A. Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

By MICHAEL CREWDSON
New York — The Republican Party's effort to sabotage Democratic presidential candidates in 1972 was a two-pronged operation approved by some of President Nixon's most influential aides, directed in part by White House officials, and financed with more than $100,000 in unreported contributions to the Nixon campaign.

That is the picture painted by informed sources in an extensive inquiry by the New York Times seeking to pull together the elements of the sabotage program. The inquiry included a number of interviews with sources familiar with the program, public and private testimony by principals in the case, and information gathered by government investigators.

The sources said that one branch of the broad program of spying and sabotage — the one involving lawyer Donald H. Segretti — was conceived in early 1971 and approved in advance by H. R. Haldeman, then chief of the White House staff.

A separate sabotage campaign was managed by Jeb Stuart Magruder, deputy director of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, and received some direction from Charles W. Colson, then special counsel to the President, the sources said.

The secret operations at their height embraced a widely scattered and sometimes disorganized network of amateurs who engaged in political pranks as well as more serious, and even violent activities.

The extent to which the sabotage effort achieved its aim of demoralizing and weakening the President's Democratic opponents is not fully known, and may never be, although it will become the subject of the Senate's Watergate hearings later this year.

However, sources said a number of the same individuals who allegedly planned or helped to cover up the Watergate bugging were, to varying degrees, associated with the sabotage operation, and more has recently been learned of the scope of its activity and of the precise authority on which it was undertaken.

Many who worked in the undercover campaign, which was characterized by such spy-novel fillips as code names and secret mail drops, would not talk about their activities for fear of legal repercussions, and few of those who did speak would allow their names to be used. As a result, much of what took place remains unknown, and accounts of other events are necessarily one-sided.

Extraordinary Account
But inquiry by the New York Times has provided an extraordinary account of an attempt by the political party in power to confuse and subvert its opposition through covert attacks.

Among the major points that have emerged from these sources follow:

Haldeman, while chief of the White House staff, approved a plan for "covert activities and intelligence" conceived by two other presidential aides, Dwight L. Chapin and Gordon C. Strachan, and headed by a young California lawyer named Donald H. Segretti.

Chapin, who has recently been denying knowledge of Segretti's specific activities, in fact told the FBI last year that he was aware that Segretti had published "false scheduling information" relating to the campaign of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, a potential violation of federal law.

Colson allegedly provided some direction for the second sabotage effort supervised by Magruder. This operation, on one occasion, hired a group of men, including two of the Watergate burglars, to conduct a counter-demonstration against Dr. Daniel Ellsberg at an anti-war rally. At one point the men physically attacked Ellsberg. Colson emphatically denied that he was involved in the incident.

Between June of 1971 and August of last year, when the reelection committee's operation was abandoned as "too costly," the two distinct but sometimes overlapping sabotage efforts employed more than a score of operatives working in at least seven primary states: New Hampshire, Florida, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and California.

When Segretti's cover was blown by news reports of his activities last October, White House officials, fearing repercussions in the presidential election less than a month away, began a cover-up of the sabotage operation that, by the account of one participant, included possible perjury and obstruction of justice by high Nixon administration officials.

Conceived By Aides
One key participant, who said that the planning of the sabotage effort dated from February of 1971, speculated that it was conceived by White House aides in response to the Republican Party's discouraging performance in November, 1970, when, despite intensive campaigning by Nixon, it lost 11 seats in the House and failed to substantially reduce the Democratic majority in the Senate.

"I think they just decided, 'next time it's the President — and our jobs,'" the participant said.

The first White House officials to broach the need for a Republican sabotage operation were Chapin, 32, a former junior advertising executive who served until February as the President's appointments secretary, and Strachan, 29, a classmate of Chapin's at the University of Southern California and a former assistant to Haldeman.

According to a memorandum written last fall by Richard A. Moore, a special counsel to President Nixon, the objective Chapin and Strachan had in mind was "to create such confusion among the primary candidates that it would be difficult for the Democratic Party to come back together after the convention."

During a secret session of the Watergate Grand Jury on April 11, according to published excerpts of the testimony, both men took full responsibility for hiring Segretti, a mutual friend since college days, and Chapin said that he himself had authorized Herbert W. Kalmbach, then the President's personal lawyer, to pay Segretti.

Approval Later
According to the Strachan testimony, Haldeman's approval of the Segretti operation was sought and obtained only after he and Chapin had already set it in motion.

Both men also maintained that they had not given Segretti, who has been indicted for some of his activities, any specific instructions. "We wanted to set him up and get him started and not have to worry about him later," Strachan testified.

However, the White House memorandum, provided to the Watergate committee by the former presidential counsel, John W. Dean III, asserts that an individual referred to as "w," whom Senate sources have identified as Haldeman, gave both men permission in advance to "go ahead and implement" their proposal.

Dean went further in his testimony before the committee, saying that Haldeman, contrary to Chapin's assertion, had also approved the financing for the operation.

Kalmbach has told the FBI that he provided Segretti with $30,000 to $40,000 in funds collected from anonymous Republican campaign contributors.

Besides being the earliest, the Segretti operation was the more ambitious, and at times the less professional, of the two sabotage efforts.

Many Refused
Many former law school classmates and other friends, including some old girl friends whom Segretti asked to work in the sabotage operation turned him down. It was not until, perhaps in desperation, he began to seek out young conservatives from local Republican groups around the country, explaining to them the "fun" that could be had in a "negative campaign," that he finally began to weave together the threads that would form his network of agents.

During the time he was crisscrossing the country in search of spies, Segretti was also meeting with Chapin to discuss the strategy and tactics of his operation.

One such meeting took place Sept. 25 in Portland, Ore., where Chapin had accompanied the President on the way to a meeting in Alaska with Emperor Hirohito of Japan.

According to the White House summary prepared by Moore, hostile demonstrations against the President were expected during his stopover in Portland, and Chapin had invited his protégé, who obtained a room at the Benson Hotel where the presidential party was quartered, to see first-hand how logistical and crowd-control problems were handled.

At other meetings in California and Washington, D.C., Chapin urged his friend to begin studying the Democratic candidates through "legitimate" surveillance, and suggested to him examples of harassment that could be employed against them.

Brooke: Disaster Faces Indochina

Washington (AP) — Extensive outside relief is needed to avoid "a human disaster of major proportions" in Indochina, according to Sen. Howard Brooke, R-Mass.

In a 143-page report to the Senate appropriations Committee, Brooke outlined the plight of some three million refugees of the Vietnam War. While widespread disease and starvation are not evident, Brooke said that none of the countries involved is capable of solving its refugee problems alone.

Brooke's findings are based on his two-week fact-finding journey to Southeast Asia in April as the ranking Republican on the Senate foreign operations subcommittee.

The senator indicated that the refugee problem was most severe in Cambodia where continued fighting and U.S. bombing have "led to a dramatic increase in the flow of refugees" into the capital city of Phnom Penh.

Brooke said the Cambodian government "simply does not possess the capability to cope with the many problems of the refugees."

"Food and food distribution capabilities are lacking; medical facilities and supplies are woefully inadequate; satisfactory refugee camps are virtually nonexistent," he stated.

Brooke said he found conditions somewhat better in Laos and South Vietnam, but concluded that both countries would require "large amounts of foreign assistance" to handle post-war, humanitarian problems.

He indicated the lack of a workable cease-fire in Indochina made it difficult to make an accurate dollar estimate on the amount of aid required to solve those problems.

However, he said that in talks with Japanese leaders he pointed out that Congress-faced by cutbacks in domestic programs — "is extremely unlikely" to approve a $7.5 billion, five-year reconstruction plan mentioned by President Nixon.

Although unable to visit North Vietnam, Brooke included a short section of observations based on second-hand information concerning the question of post-war aid to Hanoi. He stated that the North Vietnamese are not in desperate need of emergency relief and are mainly interested in American aid as a means of making the point that the U.S. "owes" Hanoi reparations payment for damage caused by the bombing.

Brooke made a number of other points concerning Southeast Asia:

—The lack of cooperation by the Communists is the chief obstacle in the path of accounting of U.S. Servicemen missing in action in Indochina.

—Charges of brutality and torture in South Vietnamese prisons necessitate serious questioning of continued U.S. support for Vietnam's public safety program.

—The dire circumstances of children left orphaned by the war calls for an immediate streamlining of adoption procedures.

Troops Open Route To Sea For Capital

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Supported by almost constant American bombing, government troops reopened Phnom Penh's supply route to the sea Sunday after five days of fighting, the Cambodian military command reported.

The rebels had cut the vital Highway 4 at the village of Prey Phdau 19 miles west of the capital on Tuesday and had held a one-mile stretch of the road since then with about three battalions.

Highway 4 leads to the port of Kompong Som, which is Phnom Penh's main source of imported rice.

Apparently ignoring the government's cease-fire appeal that was issued Friday, the Communist-led insurgents have switched the focus of their assaults to south of Phnom Penh against government positions on Highway 3.

Field reports said the anti-government forces occupied the garrison towns of Kompong Tuol and Anlong Romiet and had surrounded a government battalion in the district town of Kompong Kantuot.

Kompong Tuol straddles an important junction between the north-south Highway 3 and Provincial Route 38, which joins it from the east and runs roughly parallel to the capital's southern front. Anlong Romiet lies a mile to the south and Kompong Kantuot a mile to the east of the important highway junction.

About 400 government troops were reported trapped in Kompong Kantuot's market place with insurgent forces all around them. Officers in the field said Saturday they expected the battalion soon will be overrun.

A column of reinforcements backed by armored personnel carriers that was sent to relieve the encircled force was blocked by Communist-led troops in bunker positions half a mile north of the road junction. Strafing by American F4 Phantoms and A7 Corsairs failed to dislodge them by nightfall.

A number of government troops were reported mingled with refugees fleeing the combat zone toward Phnom Penh.

A government communique announced the arrival in Phnom Penh of the first of 68 trucks laden with rice from northern Battambang Province. They came down the recently reopened Highway 5.

Meanwhile, the South Vietnamese command said in Saigon that there were 68 alleged violations of the cease-fire during the 30-hour period ended at noon Sunday.

The command reported that a Viet Cong shelling attack, a grenade attack and small arms fire killed three persons and wounded 56 in a series of three incidents in scattered parts of the Mekong Delta.

All three of the dead and 14 of the wounded were civilians, the command reported. It said this raised total civilian casualties to 1,171 killed and 3,188 wounded since the cease-fire went into effect Jan. 28.

Saigon radio reported that President Nguyen Van Thieu fired a province chief and four other government officials because they were accused of corruption in connection with money intended for refugees in the Da Nang area.

Tormenting Rectal Itch Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues
Promptly Relieved

Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief from Such Burning Itch and Pain in Many Cases.

The burning itch and pain caused by infection and inflammation in hemorrhoidal tissues can cause much suffering. But there is an exclusive formulation that in many cases gives prompt relief for hours from this itch and pain so that the sufferer is more comfortable again. It also actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation and infection.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center reported similar successful results in many cases. This is the same medication you can buy at any drug counter under the name Preparation H.

Preparation H also lubricates to protect the inflamed surface area and it doesn't sting or smart. In fact, it has very soothing qualities which make it especially helpful during the night when itching becomes more intense.

There's no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

TIMBER LINES

Crappie And Bluegill Time

About the only fishing an angler can enjoy this time of year is crappie and bluegill for the simple reason that all the big ones head for the deep, cool holes of the lakes and rivers.

Of course, at night, some set lines will produce a few big cats and bullheads and sometimes on a lazy summer afternoon, a river angler fishing deep along a bank may bring up a good-sized catfish, but for the most part, crappies and bluegills occupy most anglers' fishing time.

"They'll (crappies and bluegills) usually be found close to the banks under trees or where there's some shade," Lincolnite Tom Akins explains. "That's because they like shallow water where the big ones can't get to them as easy.

"About this time of the year, myself and Chuck (Talbot) like to take a small boat and fish the shallows especially on the west end of Branched Oak Lake, near the trees at Olive or the same place at Emerald," he says. "We can usually boat a pretty hefty stringer and for action, you can't beat those bluegills on a small spinning rig."

Last week, the duo left Lincoln right after work at six and came home four hours later with enough of a catch to keep them busy for another hour.

One of the reasons that few people like to keep crappie and bluegill, however, is simply because they're hard to clean. Not hard, maybe, but time consuming and there usually isn't enough meat to bother with. But Rodney Helberg has found a way to clean them without too much bother and usually has enough meat left to make a decent meal.

"I just cut along the backbone, lay the meat over and trim it off the skin," Rodney explains. "The trick is to leave everything else on the fish. That simplifies it when you're cleaning the really small fish.

"You may lose a little meat now-and-then, but in the long run, you never miss it. And it's faster than skinning them and gutting them and the whole long involved way we used to do it," he says.

Not exactly revolutionary . . . the method is called filleting. . . but Rodney's way leaves everything on the fish. Instead of cutting the skin free, then the meat, he simply reverses the order. That gives him a little more to hold onto while cleaning.

"We use a similar cleaning method," Tom explains. "I suppose that way might be easier, but we're to the point where we can just whip them through in no time at all.

"The real trick," he continues, "is catching them. You have to catch them before you can clean them." Sound observation.

Helberg will not fish in one spot more than fifteen minutes if he doesn't catch anything. After that time period, he'll move to a different spot.

"I don't know what most people do," he says. "But I think you have to catch something within fifteen minutes or else you won't have any luck at that spot for the rest of the day.

"I know some people are willing to sit on the bank for hours without catching anything, but I don't think you're accomplishing anything that way," he adds. "I'll fish one spot for fifteen minutes then move to another until I've pretty well covered the lake. If I haven't caught anything by then, I'll just go home.

"There's no sense in making yourself miserable by waiting for them to bite. There's always another day."

"I've gotta agree with that," Tom says. "You're going to catch something within a half hour in one spot or else you're not going to catch anything at all. A half hour, I think, is a little better time period because you're going to give the fish a chance to move around a little more, but either way, you have to set yourself a time period then stick to it."

North Takes Fourth

By MIKE JOHNSON

Star Sports Writer

Bill North captured his fourth consecutive men's advanced tennis singles championship Sunday at the Northeast High courts in the Kiwanis tennis tournament.

North, who has also won the doubles title three of the four years the meet has been in existence, defeated Jack Eldswick, 10-4, in the singles finals.

"I like to think that a 35-year-old man can get in shape," North said, when asked about a tennis player's prime years. "A 27- or 28-year old man has the endurance of youth and the experience of age but I like to think a man in his 30s can still compete."

Despite the 93-degree temperature, the match moved briskly. Discussion still loomed concerning the possible rules changes to speed up the matches.

Tournament director Keith Watt said that the meet next year could possibly follow a "no-add" system.

"A no-add system would erase a deuce situation," Watt said. "With no deuce, the matches would move much faster."

North, however, said he supported the present system and said a "no-add" system would damage some of the finesse of tennis.

"Stamina would not be nearly as important with a no-add system," North said. "I think a lot of the tennis game depends on the player's condition and the no-add system would only benefit the out-of-shape players."

Defending girls champion Ruth Anderson won two titles Sunday. Miss Anderson won the girls 14 & under and the girls 16 & under divisions.

Debbie Shamberg rushed to a 10-0 triumph in the girls 18 & under division.

North's attempt to capture his fourth straight doubles championship was foiled by the duo of Ed Bullock and Sig Garnett. North's partner was John Carroll.

Watt commented on the increased number of entrants and discussed a lack of adequate facilities for the tourney.

"I wish that additional courts would be built at Woods," Watt said. "Tennis is getting big in Lincoln and we need more and better tennis facilities.

Stockton Wins By One In Milwaukee Open

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It worked out—not the way Dave Stockton planned it—but it worked out.

"I went out there with an idea of what I was gonna do," Stockton said Sunday after hanging on to a diminishing lead for a one-stroke victory in the Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

"I was in a mind to play. "I was gonna blow 'em off the golf course if I could. I like to look at the leader boards and I wanted to put some numbers up there that would be fun to look at."

"But," he said, and offered a smile, "it didn't quite work out that way."

As it was, he had to resort to his role of scrambler to pull down the $26,000 first prize with a 276 total, 12 under par on the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

He built a big early lead then played the back nine two over par. He missed five greens coming home, but chipped up close for tap-ins to save par on three of them.

Hubert Green and Homero Blancas tied for second, one stroke off the pace, after each forged a four-under-par 68 in the muggy, steamy heat.

Canadian George Knudson, with a 67, followed at 278 and veteran Bob Goalby was one more back at 279 after a final 74 that included a killing triple-bogey six.

Veteran Charlie Sifford had the best round of the day, a 66, and was tied at 280 with Vietnam veteran Buddy Allyn.

Most of the game's glamour names—Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player—skipped this event to get an early start on preparations for the British Open championship that begins Wednesday in Troon, Scotland.

Stockton, who won the first Milwaukee Open in 1968 and later won the PGA national championship, was a front-runner in this one since the second round, when he fashioned a career-best 63, nine under par.

He opened the final day with a two-stroke lead over Goalby, saw the margin increase to five strokes at the turn, then had to hang on for dear life in the tight down the stretch.

Green, the lanky, laconic winner of the Tallahassee Open earlier this season, closed up with consecutive birdies on the 11th and 12th hole.

But he was playing well in front of Stockton. He matched par on the next six holes and finished the tournament 11 under par, while Stockton was 13 under and still had two holes to play.

Blancas, paired with Stockton in the last group on the course, birdied the par five 12th and closed to within two with another bird on the 15th.

Stockton, however, bogeyed the 17th when he missed the green and suddenly had a single stroke lead. Blancas needed only a birdie on the final hole to tie and force a playoff.

But he put his drive in the rough and his approach in a bunker. He almost holed his sand shot but had to settle for a par and Stockton two-putted from some 30 feet for the par that won it.

Goalby, the 42-year-old veteran who held the first round lead, saw his chances disappear with that triple bogey six on the eighth hole. He was just two back at the time, but put his tee shot in the left rough, blew his next over the green, was short with the chip, got on in four and two-putted.

Ruth's Record Only 18 Away

. . .BRAVES WIN, 4-2

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hank Aaron made his final 1973 regular season appearance in New York a memorable one, blasting his 695th and 696th career home runs to give Atlanta a 4-2 victory over the New York Mets Sunday.

The 39-year-old Aaron hit both homers off former teammate George Stone, with one coming in the fourth and the other in the sixth after a walk to Darrell Evans.

The homers gave Aaron 23 for the season and left him only 18 short of Babe Ruth's major league baseball record 714 on the all-time home run list.

In other National League games, Houston scored the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning to beat Montreal 9-7. San Diego defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-2. Johnny Bench led Cincinnati to a 4-0 victory over Philadelphia. Los Angeles defeated Pittsburgh 3-2 in 12 innings and San Francisco edged St. Louis 5-4.

In American League action, the New York Yankees defeated Minnesota Twin bonus baby Eddie Bane 7-0. Detroit defeated Kansas City 3-0. California swept a doubleheader, 10-4 and 5-3, from Cleveland. Milwaukee took two from Texas 6-4 and 7-3. Baltimore beat Oakland 6-5, and in the first game of their doubleheader Chicago put a stop to Boston's winning streak by taking a 6-1 decision, before Boston won the second game 11-2.

Cesar Cedeño hit two home runs and scored the tie-breaking run in the ninth for the Astros in a game marred by a collision which left Expos shortstop Tim Foli with a broken jaw. Foli was hurt in the fourth inning when he collided with Bob Watson while attempting a tag play.

Pinch-hitter Chris Arnold, given a second chance when first baseman Tim McCarver muffed his foul pop, lofted a sacrifice fly in the seventh which provided the margin of victory for the Giants.

Rookie left-hander Randy Jones, 2-2, pitched a four-hitter and singled in a run during San Diego's two-run eighth inning. The Cubs led 2-0 until the fifth inning when John Grubb lined his fourth home run of the year.

Bench led the Cincinnati attack, singling home a pair of runs in the third inning. Jack Billingham, 12-5, hurled a four-hitter for his fifth shutout of the season.

Willie Davis belted his 12th home run of the year in the bottom of the 12th inning to help the Dodgers sweep their three-game series with Pittsburgh.

Governor's Cup Tourney Slated

By United Press International

The Lincoln Municipal Golfers' Association announced Sunday its 29th annual Governor's Cup Sweepstakes would be held Aug. 4-5.

The 36-hole tournament will offer $2,500 in prizes and have a 220-player limit.

The entry fee will include a dinner and entertainment at the Lincoln Elk's Lodge, in addition to the golf.

First-round play will be held on the Pioneers Park Golf Course with concluding play at the Holmes Park Golf Course.

Pepitone Back In U.S.

Tokyo (AP) — Joe Pepitone, who joined the Yakult Atoms of the Japanese Central League on June 24, has returned to the United States "to iron out his marital problem," a team spokesman said Sunday.

since the championships were first played in 1877—and led the relieved tournament committee to say officially it was "delighted with the tremendous support of the crowd."

Wimbledon usually produces one new tennis hero. This year it was 17-year-old Bjorn Borg, the flaxen-haired Swede who reached the men's quarter-finals and the hearts of the teenage fans in the country.

But the title went to Jan Kodeš, the 27-year-old Czech since being drafted from Arizona State University, gave up eight hits in 3 1-3 innings—five in the third inning, including Roy White's two-run homer. Thurman Munson also homered for the Yankees, and Matty Alou drove in three runs.

Willie Horton, Aurelio Rodriguez and Mickey Stanley delivered run-scoring hits for the Tigers. Mike Strahler, 3-2, who was purchased from Toledo of the International League on June 15, yielded seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. Dick Drago, 9-8, was the loser.

The Angels rallied in both ends of their doubleheader—helped by home runs by Vada Pinson and Bob Oliver in the first game, then by a 10th-inning, two-run homer by Rich Scheinblum in the second game.

John Briggs hit a three-run home run and Dave May powered a three-run shot to provide the Brewers' margin of victory in the first game, while May and George Scott hit consecutive homers in the second game.

Boston's win streak died at five when Carlos May drove in three runs with a homer and a double. The Red Sox erupted for nine runs in the 10th inning of the second game, helped by a grand slam homer by Bob Montgomery.

Gene Tenace led off the 10th inning with a home run which came after a wild ninth inning. The Orioles lost a 4-2 lead in the top of the ninth, but came back to tie the score 5-5 in their half of the inning. Tenace's homer, his 14th of the season, came off Bob Reynolds, the fourth Baltimore pitcher.

Golfers Led By Reynolds

Trevino Liked By Nicklaus

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, favored to win the British Open Golf Championship, shrugged off his chances Sunday and picked Lee Trevino to become the first American to win the title three years in a row.

"Lee will be hard to beat here at Troon," Nicklaus said. "He's playing well and this is his kind of course."

Trevino, an extrovert, exuded confidence in practice for the 102nd British Open which begins Wednesday over the rugged 7,064-yard, par 72 course alongside the Firth of Clyde.

"My game is good right now," said the 33-year-old Trevino. "This course at Troon suits me. It plays longer than any other British championship course I have seen. It's not the yardage so much, but the route you have to take to avoid trouble."

"The sand in the bunkers is softer and finer than I have ever seen on this side of the Atlantic. The ball buries itself like a fried egg. I guess this will favor the Americans rather than the British boys. We're used to soft sand in the States."

Britain's legal bookies have made Nicklaus a 7-2 favorite. The title is worth about $13,750 from total prize money of nearly $125,000.

Nicklaus won the British Open in 1966 and 1970. Trevino, the No. 2 choice at 6-1, took the title in 1971 and 1972.

Each time, he arrived only a couple of days before the tourney, leaving himself little time for practice. This year, Trevino arrived eight days before the start. His target is to become only the second golfer in this century to win the title in three successive years. Australia's Peter Thomson is the only golfer to do it, winning in 1954, 1955 and 1956.

"The pressure isn't too great because people don't expect me to do it," Trevino said after a practice round at par 72. "This is one helluva test of golf. It must be the toughest British Open on record."

Trevino spoke admiringly of Arnold Palmer's shattering victory in the last British championship played at Troon in 1962. Palmer produced an Open record of 276—12 under par.

On that occasion, Palmer finished 29 strokes ahead of Nicklaus, who made a disastrous debut in the British Open, starting with an 80 and finishing in 34th place.

"Troon isn't a course I remember much about," Nicklaus said. "At Muirfield last year, I knew every hole although I had not been there since I won this title in 1966. The difference is that Muirfield is a course I wanted to remember."

The 33-year-old Nicklaus said he picked Trevino as this year's champion "because he is a placement golfer who puts the ball into an exact position every time."

Jack, slimmer and sharper in appearance than on his last trip to Britain, added: "I only hope I can get my game together, mentally and physically, by the time the championship starts."

Tom Weiskopf, another American, was the third favorite at 10-1. Australia's Bruce Crampton, the first non-American to win $1 million on the U.S. circuit, was bracketed at 14-1 with young U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller and Gary Player of South Africa.

Palmer, who still stirs a Scottish golf crowd more than any other player, was listed at 20-1. No more popular winner would be found among all the 153 golfers facing "the terrors of Troon."

Lincoln A's Up Record To 14-4

The Lincoln A's won two games and lost one in semi-pro baseball action over the weekend to hike its record to 14-4.

The A's edged Firth, 5-4, with John Bryant scoring Chuck Arkfeld with the winning run of a sacrifice fly. Larry Abel and former Husker football player John Pitts had two hits in four trips to the plate and Arkfeld homered in that game.

Joe Livingston with a three-run home run and five RBI and Mike Reta with a two-run homer and three RBI helped Abel blank Papillion, 11-0, for the A's.

Former Nebraska all-American Bob Munson homered and held the A's to two hits to pace Garland to a 14-1 win over the Lincoln team in the third game for the A's.

Pump Set For Trout

A high-volume pump is in position near the put-and-take trout lake at Two Rivers State Recreation Area, ready to come to the rescue of trout in the lake before high water temperatures and low oxygen levels become a problem.

Fisheries biologists plan to lower the level of the lake with the pump, if conditions approach those unfavorable to trout. Hopefully, seepage would refill the lake with cooler water that can better hold a good level of oxygen.

Trout are extremely sensitive to water temperatures and oxygen levels. Compared to bass, for instance, trout require water about 20 degrees cooler, with about twice the dissolved oxygen level.

This year will mark the first use of the pump as a preventive measure. Last year, the pump was put into operation after water temperatures rose and oxygen levels plummeted, in an attempt to correct the condition.

Put-and-take operations were halted for several weeks in 1972 when conditions deteriorated to the point that trout stopped feeding and, in some cases, died. During this time, fishing was still allowed but stocking of more trout and sale of trout tags was halted.

This year, the pumps will be started up before conditions become critical in hopes of keeping the lake productive throughout the summer.

Kung To Ignore Vatican Ultimatum

©The New York Times

Tuebingen, West Germany — The Rev. Hans Kung, the Roman Catholic theologian who questions papal infallibility said Sunday that he was not against Pope Paul VI, "only against an absolute, totalitarian, authoritarian papacy."

In an interview, Kung declared he would disregard an order from the Vatican to accept its doctrine of infallibility, as redefined in a declaration last Thursday, or go to Rome to justify himself.

Vatican officials said in Rome Thursday that anyone rejecting the tenet that the church and the Pope could not err in certain circumstances placed himself "outside the church."

Go On With Work

Kung said that nevertheless "It's improbable that I will be excommunicated — I'll go on with my work, demythologizing the church."

The dogma of papal infallibility was proclaimed, following bitter disputes, by the First Vatican Council in 1870. The doctrine means that the Pope cannot err or teach error when he defines a matter of faith or morals ex cathedra, or "from the chair" of the apostle St. Peter — that is in his role as supreme teacher of the church.

The 45-year-old Swiss theologian, during the two-hour interview at his home on a hill overlooking this old university city, expressed dismay over what he termed the "anti-ecumenical spirit" of the Vatican statement on infallibility.

'Bars Progress'

"If the church affirms it never made a mistake, it actually bars any progress on interfaith efforts," Kung said. "It can only accept the return of other Christians in its fold."

Kung said Roman Catholicism has made "no serious steps toward other churches during the last few years — just gestures." He noted that the Vatican had so far refused to accept the eucharist — holy communion — performed by Protestant groups as valid.

Kung teaches dogmatic and ecumenical theology at the Tuebingen State University.

At 9:30 a.m. last Thursday, a messenger from the apostolic nunciature — the papal diplomatic mission in Bonn — called at Kung's home here to deliver the Latin and German texts of the Vatican's 4,000-word statement on infallibility that was about to be published in Rome.

A sealed letter to Kung accompanying the document stated in effect that it was the Vatican's reply to his book "Infallible? An Inquiry," and contained the order to submit or appear as a defendant in a Rome proceeding.

The letter was sent from the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly known as the Holy Office, the church's highest tribunal in matters of faith and morals. The letter was signed by Franjo Cardinal Seper, a Yugoslav who heads the congregation.

Inquisition Style

Kung observed that the "old practices of the Inquisition" were still being applied in Rome. "I was always ready to go to Rome," he said, "but under fair conditions, not as a defendant who had no right to examine the record, no way of choosing his own counsel, and no possibility of appeal."

Kung noted that the letter from the Vatican congregation enjoined him to submit to the statement on infallibility "at once" whereas it had taken the papal authorities three years to react to his 1970 book without really answering the questions he had raised.

The Vatican declaration, which was sanctioned by Pope Paul, reminded Roman Catholics of the definition of the dogma of infallibility by the First Vatican Council in 1870, as well as doctrinal pronouncements on the same subject by the Second Vatican Council 1962 to 1965.

The Vatican declaration said that immunity from error occurred through consent by all bishops, or when the Pope, speaking as pastor and teacher of all Christians, defined a doctrine concerning faith or morals.

Loyal To Church

The Swiss theologian, who studied for seven years in Rome, was emphatic in declaring himself loyal to the church. "I am not even at its periphery," he said.

"But I see the immense problems of lay people and priests today."

Declaring himself in favor of "some central church authority," Kung said he had the highest esteem for Pope Paul personally, "but it is very difficult to see from the Vatican how the world really is."

Bahamians Set Break With British

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — The Union Jack will be replaced by a blue, gold and black banner of independence for the Bahamas at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, marking the end of 300 years of British rule on the island chain.

Prince Charles, 24-year-old heir to the British crown, arrived in Nassau on Friday aboard the Royal Navy frigate HMS Minerva, where he serves as assistant gunnery officer. He said he was looking forward to joining the independence celebrations.

Prince Charles, a boating enthusiast, spent Saturday afternoon watching the Independence Regatta. He was also presented to the Bahama Cabinet and visiting delegations, including the U.S. group headed by Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton.

Also in the U.S. delegation was Stanley Scott, special assistant to President Nixon and the highest ranking black in the White House.

Formal independence ceremonies begin at 10 p.m. Monday both in Nassau and several out islands, including Abaco where opposition to independence has been strongest and most vocal.

"There's no longer any use protesting," said Geoffrey Johnstone, 45, whose ancestors were among the Tory monarchists who fled the American Revolution. Johnstone is the former leader of the opposition in the Bahamas House Assembly.

"I find it very sad to see the British flag hauled down. I personally feel that the colony was going along very well under Great Britain," said Sir Roland Symonette, 74, who has been a member of the House since 1925. Johnstone said he still has a "great emotional tie to the British nation" but that the Prince "was just a nice young man, going around the world... turning over countries to their peoples very politely and saying 'I wish you the best of British luck.'"

There was no banker with authority who was ready to forecast how trade would develop when markets reopen Monday. Sources pointed out that even small amounts can produce a spectacular trend either way.

The European bankers who had come to Basel for the three day meeting were understood to be clamoring for U.S. intervention to support the dollar. Volcker's statements Friday yielded no hint that Washington was close to taking action. He said the one thing to do was to "wait and see and watch."

The French finance minister, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, called on the United States to intervene.

Israel Captures Fish 'Bombers'

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — An Israeli naval patrol boat captured five Lebanese fishermen fishing with bombs instead of nets in Israeli territorial waters, police said Sunday.

They were to stand trial Monday on charges of illegal entry and fishing with explosives. Israeli fishermen say the bombs kill small fish and deplete the future supply.

Police said the Lebanese fishermen told interrogators that catches are poor off the Lebanese coast, where using explosives is common although illegal.

The fishermen, who were captured Saturday, were from Ras el Nakoura, a mile across the Lebanese border.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Consumers' Buying Likely To Decrease

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

With the second half of 1973 underway, there is little tendency to deny that the abnormally rapid increase in consumer buying, especially of durable goods, including automobiles, is likely to taper off. It is customary at times for the national economy to take a step backwards before taking two steps forward.

The controversy at the Stock Exchange is whether the drastic decline in stock prices since the January peaks has over-discounted prospects of moderation in the business pace during the third and fourth quarters this year and during 1974.

Unless the contraction ahead for the national economy proves to be much worse than most forecasts by economists, then it follows that the speculative pessimism has been overdone.

Since stock prices depend on the imponderables of future expectations, there is anything but unanimity in Wall Street.

When knowledgeable investors became aware early this year that the consumer buying surge, which exceeded forecasts, was above a sustainable level, there was a sudden shrinkage in bids for shares at high quotations. Aware operators realized that it would be fallacious to assume that these big temporary jumps constituted the new normal. The buying bulge was accompanied by a huge increase in installment debt, and by a decline in the previous high percentage of individual income which was being saved. The adjustment of stock prices to changing expectations would doubtless have been more orderly except for psychology growing out of accelerated inflation, panicky decline of the dollar and by the unfolding of the Watergate scandal.

With consumer demand taxing the full capacity, there was a decision by managing directors of corporations to raise their commitments for capital goods. Business economists accordingly increased their forecasts of capital expenditures for plant and equipment to 14.7% above the 1972 level. Besides the impulse to deal with immediate shortages, thoughtful business managers are aware of a changed competitive situation.

With foreign countries, led by Japan and West Germany, using highly sophisticated technology, American producers no longer can offset vastly higher than the international average of wages through superior technical methods. On the contrary, there were indications that competitively we had accumulated a disadvantage in obsolescence of equipment. Accordingly, short term and local term factors combined to induce heavier spending for new cost-cutting equipment.

However, the willingness of managing directors to continue on this larger capital expenditure program hinged on their appraisal that customer demand, even though it might fall below the first half year peak, would be substantial.

For the short pull, if capital buying should go up while consumer buying declines, the expectation would be of an ultimate increase in inventories when and if production rate exceeds current demand. Temporarily producing for inventory would contribute economic stimulus until a point was reached when management decided to cut production.

Merryle Rukeyser
Buying To Wane

In appraising the impact of such apparently contradictory prospective forces, Henry C. Wallich, Yale Economist stated: "The present capital spending boom, though cyclically (temporarily) unsettling, is a move in the right direction. To correct the capital-labor imbalance more fully, still more investment (in new plant and equipment) will be needed. This will call for more effective tax and credit measures to stimulate investment in the years to come."

"The drain that a downturn in consumer spending could impose on the economy might exceed the immediate stimulus that can come from higher investment. A rise in the saving rate of 1% would cut consumption close to $10 billion. A rise in business fixed investment spending by an additional 4 to 5%, would add little more than half that amount. The consumer, therefore, will probably call the tune."

"But how that tune will sound depends on other circumstances. Inventories will moderate it. Many capital goods involve a long lead time which would add to inventories. Declining consumer purchases would at first cause goods to back up before production schedules could be cut. The net effect of a pile-up of inventories late in 1973 would be to postpone the downturn and make it more severe when it comes. There is no reason to anticipate a recession on the scale of 1958. The main probability seems to be on the side of a slight downturn in real GNP (gross national product)."

If there is merit in Professor Wallich's analysis, it is being a sucker suddenly to turn pessimistic after the market has fallen out of bed.

Synod Threatens To Defrock 3 Bishops

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Patriarch Nicolaos of Alexandria, president of a major Orthodox synod meeting here, issued a strong ecclesiastical threat Sunday to the three bishops of the Cyprus Church who defrocked President Makarios.

Observers saw the patriarch's action, as likely to increase the danger of a religious-political civil war between the bitterly divided Greek Cypriot factions supporting Archbishop Makarios on one side and the bishops on the other.

Patriarch Nicolaos attacked the three bishops in a speech after Sunday Mass in the Church of Evangelistria of Palouriotissa.

"We deliver them this moment to anathema and may they bear the consequences," he said. "If the three reject a final conciliation plea by the synod, the Church is empowered through the grace of God to punish them to restore and impose the disturbed moral and ecclesiastical order here."

This was taken as an indication

Italian Cabinet Is Sworn In

ROME (AP) — The new 28-member cabinet of Premier Mariano Rumor was sworn in Sunday at the Quirinal Palace before President Giovanni Leone.

The new coalition government of Christian Democrats, Marxist Socialists, Democratic Socialists and Republicans was announced by Rumor on Saturday. Rumor is a Christian Democrat.

The government, Italy's 35th since the fall of fascism, came as the country faces its worst economic slump in decades.

wake of their decision last April to defrock him.

They said President Makarios was violating ecclesiastical law by mixing his duties as bishop with those of president. Makarios backers interpreted the defrocking as a political act designed to embarrass the president in his dealings with Greek Cypriots who urge immediate union with Greece.

Archbishop Makarios, himself a Greek Cypriot, has refused to push for immediate union with Greece because of violent opposition from the 20 per cent Turkish minority on this

Group Urges Hospitals To Save For The Future

OMAHA, (AP) — The Nebraska Hospital Association believes hospital patients now should help pay for facilities patients will need in 40 years. A spokesman says the group believes it is wiser to save ahead than borrow in the future.

Leroy Rogers, an association official, said some Nebraska hospitals soon may raise rates in hopes of saving money over a period of years. Rogers is the director of the organization's new hospital rate review plan.

The Nebraska Hospital Reimbursement Plan, under development for three years, should have its first trial run this month as the first three hospitals go through the voluntary review.

Hospitals submit data giving a breakdown of expenses and earnings, an accounting of assets and liabilities and projects for the next year.

Rogers said some institutions, particularly larger ones, are saving ahead, but a number of others are not.

Robert O'Hara, associate director for fiscal service, gives as an example a hospital which knows it will need $10 million in 40 years to replace its building. By saving about $82,000 a year for 40 years at five per cent interest, the hospital will have the $10 million.

This would add about $1.20 per day to each patient's bill in a 200 bed hospital that keeps 80 per cent of its beds filled on the average.

O'Hara said that based on the impact of inflation on hospitals since 1920, it has been estimated that 40 years from now it will take between $4 and $5 to equal one 1973 dollar.

Rogers said he believes the large majority of Nebraska's 115 hospitals will take part in the review. The pilot hospitals, which have spent months preparing information, are St. Elizabeth Community Health Center in Lincoln, Clarkson Hospital in Omaha and Perkins County Community Hospital in Grant.

'Veeblefetzers' Put In Budget

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Five "veeblefetzers" have been ordered by the Multnomah County Commission at a cost of $500.

Veeblefetzers? Well, the county's fiscal management office says the budget item was made as a joke and covers miscellaneous office furniture. "It was not meant to hide anything," an official said, noting the purchase description would be changed.

Home Town Of Tom Sawyer In Trouble

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — The home town of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn is in trouble.

The city is struggling to recover from this spring's record floods and the merchants along Main Street don't know if they can manage.

"I'd just like to move away," says former Mayor Harry Cosgrove, who owns a drugstore on Main Street. "But my neighbors wouldn't like it if I left."

Last spring, during what's become known as the "Great Flood of '73," muddy water ran up to six feet deep in shoe stores and dress shops and in Cosgrove's drugstore.

Other places along 1,000 miles of rampaging river took a beating, too. The suburbs of St. Louis, for instance, about 100 miles downstream. Quincy, Ill., 20 miles upriver.

But Hannibal residents say their community remains more open to a repeat performance than any other town.

Actually, this city of 19,600 is mainly in the hills. But downtown — including the 12-block Main Street — has always been on a flat strip right beside the Mississippi.

That's the way it was back in the 1840s when Samuel Clemens was a boy and steamboats ruled the river.

Tourists now troop through the white frame house just off Main Street where Clemens grew up, becoming a steamboat pilot and later writing under the name Mark Twain. His boyhood here is reflected in "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

The mayor assumed office during the flood. His predecessor obligingly drew a red circle on the carpet and on the desk to mark where to spot tin cans to catch drips from the leaky roof when it rained.

City Hall's leaky roof and the Upper Mississippi's record flood

Other riverside dwellers in this vicinity go in for levees these days and people here say that the levees protecting farmland on the Illinois side of the Mississippi help compress the river's flow during high water and force it onto Hannibal's streets.

The levees hem in the river when it floods. No longer can it spread six to eight miles wide across Illinois lowland farm country — a "safety valve" drainoff that used to keep Hannibal reasonably dry.

"They are getting increased benefits from our tax dollars because of the Corps of Engineers levees," said George H. Pace, director of the Chamber of Commerce. "We are suffering."

"This is a very touchy thing," he added. "They are our neighbors across the river, they sustain us, they are our economic life. But at the same time, when they receive an assist from our tax dollars to raise their levee over there to protect their investment, they aggravate our problems. And we're citizens, too."

Calvin L. Davis, director of the Board of Public Works, said a delegation sent to Washington to seek federal help got $30,000 diverted to the Corps of Engineers for a study to update a 1964 survey of a flood wall for Hannibal.

But Mayor Bernard Williams said a flood wall for the entire area is probably not economically feasible. "The Corps said it wasn't feasible then (in 1964) and construction costs would be up considerably now."

The mayor assumed office during the flood. His predecessor obligingly drew a red circle on the carpet and on the desk to mark where to spot tin cans to catch drips from the leaky roof when it rained.

Westmoreland: Draft Eliminated Too Quickly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retired Gen. William Westmoreland, former Army chief of staff, said in a newspaper article Sunday: "As a nation, we moved too fast in eliminating the draft."

Westmoreland said a lottery system draft should be maintained to permit quick mobilization and to ensure that service personnel will represent all levels of American society.

Writing in the Los Angeles Times, Westmoreland said normally the services could be manned 90 per cent by volunteers. But, he said, "The Selective Service machinery can be considered as national security insurance since it can expand our forces rapidly."

Westmoreland also said, "I deplore the prospect of our military forces not representing a cross-section of our society. Without the draft, for example, few representatives of affluent families will serve in uniform."

Westmoreland acknowledged that the Army is having difficulty attracting volunteers. He mentioned surveys which indicated that only half of the fathers of young men looked favorably on having their sons serve in the military, and one-quarter of the young men favored the idea.

North Korea Accuses South Of Sabotage Use

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea accused South Korea on Sunday of using sabotage "behind the curtain" of dialogue between the two sides. It said this came despite the agreement between North and South to eliminate tension and seek peaceful reunification of Korea.

Broadcasts from Pyongyang also accused South Korean authorities of running a "military fascist dictatorship." The speakers denounced what Pyongyang called American meddling in efforts to reunify Korea and attacked a new radio station established in South Korea by an American missionary group.

The attacks, broadcast by Pyongyang's official Korean Central News Agency, were a further sign of North Korea's recent intensification of propaganda against the South following a brief letup just after the North and South agreed last July to seek reunification.

The sabotage charge came in a commentary on North Korea's earlier announcement that it had captured five South Korean "armed spies." The commentary said the five had continued trying to collect North Korean military and state secrets even after last July's agreement.

The broadcasts quoted James W. Morley of Columbia University, identified as a consultant to the U.S. State Department, as saying Korean reunification is impossible without an agreement among the big powers.

They said this shows that the Nixon administration maintains a "wild design to keep up its colonial rule over South Korea and dominate the whole of Korea and Asia with it as a springboard."

The radio station that angered the North Koreans is Far East Broadcasting, which began operations July 1 on South Korea's Cheju Island. It moved to Cheju from Okinawa when new broadcasting regulations went into effect after the Pacific island reverted from U.S. to Japanese rule last year.

The station is operated by a missionary group based in Whittier, Calif.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
